Local Reaction to President's Move Is Varied

Reaction in San Mateo County to President Nixon's wage-price freeze was varied today.

There was both optimism and pessimism expressed by a number of sources.

Dixon Arnett, Republican Assemblyman from the county's 26th District, said the President's decision was both a proper and a needed one at this time.

He said the plan is a recognition that business and labor have been unable to police themselves.

He said it also indicated that continued deficit spending by government and the spiralling imbalance of payments condition also made such a radical decision imperative.

Arnett said the move by the President would create an awareness of the seriousness of the economic situation in the nation among the populace. He said such a step can show that the leadership, particularly among labor unions, has not been mindful of the country's total economic condition.

"After watching labor and management do only a little quiet bargaining over that huge steel contract," he said, "You get the feeling that both sides have taken a consumer be damned attitude."

San Mateo County Congressman Paul McCloskey commended the President for taking the initiative to aid the economy.

He said, "It is good to see the President demonstrate against his great political flexibility in response to public demand. It shows once more that what the President is so sure of one day he may discard the next."

McCloskey added that, now that the President has responded to the needs of the economy, he ought to consider ending the U.S. war effort in southeast Asia, subject only to the return of American POW's.

Henry Bostwick, director of the San Mateo County Development Association, said the freeze could well be a very helpful thing for the county's economy.

He said the decision may give confidence to the building industry to again begin some major construction in this area. He said it could provide incentives to build plants and in-plant facilities.

He said he can foresee the move affecting positively the county's unemployment situation, too.

"Frankly," he said, "I feel this will bolster things. And you know that business here hasn't been too good for the past year or so."

He added that the decision was a long time in coming. "I couldn't see how the President could adjust the economy without it," he said. "Now, we've got to sit back, pause and see what the results are going to be."

He said it would be hard to predict the effects of the decision and he noted that trying to compare this effort with that of the pre-World War II conditions that forced the first such freeze was not possible.

"The two situations are not comparable," Bostwick said.

Trying to decide the outcome of the current cemetery strike in Colma is now impossible, according to Maurice Fitzgerald.

Fitzgerald, secretary treasurer of the Cemetery Workers' Union Local 265, said a scheduled meeting today between his organization and cemetery management "will likely prove fruitless" in the face of President Nixon's proposals.

Union officials and management haven't the foggiest idea where to turn for answers to work-related questions this morning," Fitzgerald said.

"It's almost like flipping a coin at this point," Fitzgerald said.

He called Nixon's proposals "vague" and "leaving many questions unanswered."

County Treasurer-Tax Collector Ross Conti saw the President's move as "an attempt to create a positive psychology in the market."

"I hope he's successful," Conti added. "It was the positive direction to take and looks like the right thing for the economy."

Conti said the wage-price freeze was long overdue.

He noted that the moves have already had the effect of strengthening the money market.

He administers $44 million in long-term investments for the county retirement fund and another $83 million in short-term investments of county general funds.

Conti said the success of the program will depend in the long-run on public acceptance. Early enthusiasm might stimulate the economy, he said, but could wane and force the President to extend the freeze

Conti doubted that the freeze will cause any major changes in the conduct of county government and urged county officials to be "extremely cautious in their evaluation of it."

County Manager M.D. Tarshes expressed cautious approval of the general idea but took a wait-and-see position as to the

Got a Complaint About a Bill? Go Tell It to D. C.'s Computer

If you're a resident of Daly City and have a complaint about your utility bill tell it to the computer..

From now on all utility bills—those dealing with water and refuse collection — will be sped on their way to homeowners from the city's new Computer Center in the basement of City Hall.

Eventually other billings will be added to the present utility charges—things like statements on cable television, if you happen to contract for this upcoming service.

The computer center houses in air conditioned comfort the so-called "third generation" NCR (National Cash Register) Century 100 models.

The blinking, clicking computers are now in the process of "learning" all about Daly City's water users.

Smith is the person responsible for converting the city's old hand method of billing into a machine-operation.

The machines are owned and operated by the Vista Computer Systems company under a joint agreement with the city.

Vista is the same company that owns Vista Grande Cablevision company.

The agreement says in effect that until Vista gets its own building inmid-1972 the city will provide space, postage and cost of keypunching while Vista will furnish the knowhow and computers for the operation.

So far the arrangement is expected to save taxpayers a considerable amount of money in the billing of utilities alone.

Don Andrews, Vista's supervisor in charge of the system, said other billings, perhaps payrolls, may be added to the work done by the computers.

Although still in the early stages of conversion and "shakedown" the computers are already saving the city time in processing utility bills.

And as far as Allen Hertel, of the city's Finance Department, is concerned "Time is money—taxpayers' money."

As an example of how much time the computers save, Andrews cited efforts involved in mailing out 800 billings.

In the "old days" it took 1½ persons 1½ days (18 work hours total).

With computers the same job is completed in six hours total using two persons — a saving of 12 hours.

"We're still suffering the effects of birth pangs," Andrews explained. "Later we'll be able to increase the efficiency."

Conclude Juvenile Case

Final disposition has been made for two South San Francisco teen-agers charged with the strangulation death of the 17-year-old sister of one of the boys last May.

Juvenile Court Judge Allison Rouse has ordered Robert V. Anderson, 15, admitted to Napa State Hospital for psychiatric treatment.

Jerald C. Clymo, 14-year-old companion was referred to the California Youth Authority. Both referrals are for indefinite periods, according to Willard Oates of the county juvenile center in Belmont.

The youths entered involuntary manslaughter pleas in the death of Karen Lee Anderson. The body of the girl was found by her mother pinned between a bed and a wall.

According to the coroner, death was the result of strangulation.

S.S.F. Council Repeals Ban on No-Return Containers

Final action to repeal South San Francisco's controversial ordinance to ban non-returnable bottles and cans was taken on Monday amid pleas to place the matter on the April municipal ballot.

Councilman Warren Steinkamp even made a motion to that effect, which was seconded by Councilman Frank Mammini, but defeated on a 3-2 vote. Mayor Bill Borba and Councilmen Pat Ahern and Frank Bertucelli yere against it.

Steinkamp said. "It is disturbing to think we lack that little bit of foresight that will not enable us to carry through this ordinance."

Mammini said, "There is a need for some kind of legislation to control this problem." Both Mammini and Steinkamp mentioned roadways and mountain trails littered with bottles and cans.

Steinkamp said he'd seen beer cans at elevations of more than 10,000 feet. Mammini said he saw a lot of bottles and cans, but none of them were mustard or mayonnaise containers.

Resident Bob Polzoni said that placing the matter on the ballot and letting the residents decide the issue would be a good test case for a senate subcommittee.

One of the three youths that pushed for the ordinance, Bob Bowen, said more than 3,000 residents signed petitions pro and con on the ordinance. "People get elected in this city by that margin," he said. Bowen also noted that he has collected newspaper clippings on the matter from as far as the Philippines. "It's not fair to let five people decide such an issue," said Bowen.

Another youth, David Fassler, noted no businessmen were present and asked if they still intended to establish a series of recycling bins.

An "apparently not" type answer came from Resident Terry Mirri, who was a member of the study committee to seek alternates to the ordinance.

Mirri indicated that one of the conditions was that South San Francisco High School ecology teacher Gene Mullin head the program and students give it their support.

Mullin at the final committee meeting said he could not assume such duties.

The businessmen of the city at one time offered to put up $5,000 for recycling, as an alternative to the ordinance.

The original ordinance was initially adopted on January 18, and an amended version was adopted on May 17. This was then given a 90-day moratorium, and now has been repealed.

Hair Battle Grows in S.S.F.

By BOB PETERSON

A hair controversy has developed in South San Francisco.

City Manager Gale Dreisbach has issued a memorandum saying beards are out, sideburns and mustaches had better be neatly trimmed and hair length must conform to specified standards.

Employes sporting excessive hair growth are upset. Some have said they have no intention of conforming. They guarantee it will be a union matter.

Business Representative Frank Gillis of Council 57 of the County and Municipal Employes' Union could not be contacted for comment.

Dreisbach's memorandum is number 16 in a series of procedural instructions he has instituted since taking control of city hall operations.

The first 15 concerned themselves with such things as unnecessary use of lighting, use of safety equipment, nonacceptance of gratituities, accidents involving city vehicles, and the like.

The latest memo is now generating the anticipated static.

Its enforcement is based on civil defense preparedness needs.

Dreisbach says that as civil defense director it is essential that he insure civil defense preparedness to protect health, welfare and safety of the residents of the city.

"Tests conducted definitely indicate that a respiratory protective device will not provide an adequate seal on a bearded surface. Further, long hair is a burn hazard," said a paragraph in Dreisbach's memo.

He said that to insure proper and secure fit of the respiratory protective devices, and to minimize danger of fire to long hair, it is imperative that male personnel grooming reflect his established requirements.

Hair is to be neatly groomed, cut short or medium length and neatly trimmed. The back of the neck must be closely clipped or shaved and not maintained in a ragged style. Hair is not to extend over the collar of the shirt. On the back and sides of the head it will be tapered so as to conform to the contour of the head.

Sideburns are not to exceed one inch in width. They must be closely cropped, square and straight, not to extend below the top of the earlobe. Muttonchops or other bushy or unusual styles are not acceptable.

Mustaches shall not extend more than one-half inch beyond the corners of the mouth, nor below a line horizontal with the corners of the mouth. The full upper lip must be seen clearly. Extreme styles are not permitted.

As for beards, none at all are accepted.

Although it is mainly the ones with long hair who are the most critical of the new regulations, even those without beards, long hair or mustaches offer comments.

"A bit odd," said one employe simply.

"Is there any correlation between long hair and efficiency?" asked another.

Someone else muttered something about Dreishbach being paid $20,000 a year "to do a non-com's job."

For some of the memo reflects more than an edict on what Dreisbach considers proper grooming. It is to them another indication of "how far this guy (Dreisbach) can go."

The new city manager has been coming on extremely strong, and apparently some employes feel threatened, as he proceeds to work toward what he considers an efficient business-like operation.

Yet, the consensus given by employes on memorandum number 16 is that "there will be a battle over this."

Youth Recycle Center Praised by Planners

They then voted unanimously to ban the center from the location the youths sought, Monday night.

The commissioners were apologetic but firm. They acted after hearing a group of neighbors protest the location near their homes.

"I blew it," commented Mike Taylor afterward— but admitted there was little anyone could have done in view of the protests. He had made no decision Monday night on whether to appeal to City Council within the 15-day limit, seek a new site or forget it.

The site involved was the parking lot of the Community Methodist Church. The group had originally sought a site alongside the El Camino Real frontage of the parking lot, but in view of protests to that site, settled for one behind the church, on the east side of Hensley. This site, however—to occupy a 24 by 24-foot corner of the parking lot—brought the operation closer to a group of residents on Green Avenue.

"None of us want the smell of beer cans in our backyard," said Melvin R. Wilks, 599 Green Avenue. "I cannot see for the life of me why we need this recycling center anyway."

He unfolded a copy of The Times, showing an advertisement in which Phillips 66 gasoline offered to buy used cans.

"Only aluminum cans," Commissioner Leon Miller pointed out.

Lamar M. Callicott, 575 Green Avenue, former councilman and ex-police commissioner, said "there'd be a traffic mess such as you never saw before . . . It's only a narrow one-way street."

Mrs. Bea Trautman, owner of the residence at 573 Green Avenue, complained that her tenants work nights and sleep days.

"There would be trucks running back and forth . . . What guarantee do we have that they will wash their cans and bottles? . . Small children live nearby."

She wanted to know if the church will profit from it all.

Taylor tried to answer the questions that were being raised. The pickup center would be entirely surrounded by a six-foot fence and nothing would be visible. Items would not remain there but would be transferred to an older recycling center operated by Bob Taylor on Huntington. "There would be just empty barrels left."

Commissioner Leon Miller asked why the two operations could not be merged. Mike alleged that Bob Taylor would not agree to a merger unless he could be in charge . . . and the two groups were unable to reach agreement.

Miller insisted that some kind of an agreement could be reached, since both groups had the same objectives, and he could see no point in two recycling centers.

Planning Consultant Larry Wise praised the youths.

"I would like to see the young men encouraged. . . . I hate to see them discouraged. . . . I think that these boys sincerely want to do something, but they would be under so much pressure from unfriendly neighbors that they would not be happy at this location."

The planning commission chairman urged that the youths try to obtain use of the North Brae schoolyard

Bruno Plastic Landscaping Questioned

Do plastic flowers qualify as landscaping?

This question arose at Monday night's study meeting of the San Bruno Planning Commission as they sought the definitions of landscaping.

One commissioner noted that the new Sambo's Restaurant in Rollingwood has some plastic shubbery.

They indignantly agreed that henceforth, all landscaping must be living plant life—and then City Engineer Leo Van Dussen disclosed that he had been planning to try out some Astroturf on the new Sharp Park Road. The State Divsiion of Highways was using some in Burlingame, he disclosed.

D.C. Tax Rate Rises 5 Cents For Storm

The new flood control program inaugurated early this year to cope with rainstorm runoff in several sections of Daly City is responsible for adding five cents to this year's tax rate.

The new rate is $1.89 per $100 assessed valuation with a budget of $10,150,040.

In his presentation of the proposed tax rate increase Monday, city manager David Rowe said the high standard of services developed . . . during the past several years is maintained with few adjustments and limited increases to keep pace with population growth."

Rowe explained the storm drain improvement programs, including the Garden Valley and El Portal projects, will depend on the added five cent levy.

But the small tax rate increase is not a true "holding the line" picture.

Over-all, the city's assessed valuation on property rose some 11 per cent—from $129,983,092 in 1970-71 to $144,272,788 for the 1971-72 fiscal year.

"Even though the property tax constitutes less than one-half of the operating budget revenue, this increase in assessed value, as compared with 3.4 and 4.6 per cent increases in the two prior years, permits the city to meet the increased personnel and materials costs without an increase in the operating budget tax rate," Rowe said.

The new budget also reflects two significant changes in revenue allocation.

Revenues from parking fines (estimated at $40,000 for 1971-72) will be allocated to the new "Parking Fund."

This fund will be used to develop sufficient reserves to build off-street parking in the city, perhaps in the business-depressed Mission Street area.

The second reassignment in revenues is the allocation of half the cigarette tax to the Capital Outlay Fund — a policy established by the general fund in 1968.

In other discussion, the council studied the new fire rating given the city by the American Insurance Association.

The AIA has dropped Daly City from a "Class five" to a lower "Class four" fire rating.

San Bruno Planners Seek Annexation of Pacifica

San Bruno Planing Commissioners are seeking to annex a piece of Pacifica.

At Monday night's study meeting, Commissioner Leon Miller proposed the transfer of a portion of Pacifica on the Bayside of Sweeney Ridge to San Bruno.

He reported that in the past, Pacifica coufncilmen had been favorable to the concept since it would be difficult to develop this land because all sewage would have to be pumped uphill in order to get into Pacifica's treatment plants along the beach.

However, under Miller's plan, nothing would be developed under San Bruno's jurisdiction anyway. He said he wanted to create a new open space zoning under a special state law that permits a city to prezone adjacent land and then put the site under this zoning classification.

The open space zoning could be used only for open uses, such as golf courses, farming or parks.

The annexation would be sought through the Local Agency Formation Commission. Miller said that he did not expect the landowners to be happy over the annexation.

Tells of Boy's Suicide

A heart-broken Pacifica guardian has told of her own attempts to make life easy in the United States for a Bolivian boy who lived with her and who spoke little English.

"It was so tragic that Bernardo Cachi should die but it is also tragic that the story was printed wrong," she said today.

Early reports from Pacifica police said that the 14-year-old Terra Nova freshman had swallowed a can of commercial drain cleaner because he was homesick for his native country.

"That is wrong," Mrs. Marian Garnica, 843 Arguello Avenue, said today. "Bernardo feared that he would be deported to La Paz. He wanted to stay in the United States. He was learning English as rapidly as he could. He looked forward to starting Terra Nova this fall where he could join in American sports and activities."

Mrs. Garnica said that it was true that there were few friends in the neighborhood for the boy but that he liked the United States. "Even in the hospital where he was treated so well he was trying to learn the English medical terms," she said.

The boy died Sunday at Mary's Help Hospital. He had lived in Pacifica for about a year and had spent some time in Washington before that.

Interment will be either in the Bay Area or in La Paz.

Belmont—A Wealth of Feminine Beauty

"In Belmont is a lady richly left, and she is fair and fairer than that word of wondrous virtues," .... The Merchant of Venice, Act 1, Scene 1.

By JACK RUSSELL

Beautiful girls seem to run in cycles on the Peninsula. Several years ago the North county cities of Pacifica and Daly City dominated.

In more recent years San Carlos with its Dream Girl Karen Jensen who went on to movie and television stardom and Georgina Hillerby, one of San Francisco's top models and runnerup to Miss California, captured the spotlight.

This year it is Belmont's turn. The wooded city of 23,000 residents boasts California's reigning queen Carolyn Stoner who will soon be seeking Miss America laurels.

In 1969 Adrienne Lopez won the Fiesta Dream Girl title and reigned for a year as the county's fairest. The current Miss Belmont Susan Howard was a runnerup in the Dream Girl contest this year.

But these are only the more publicized beauties. With a girls' high school Notre Dame and a predominantly girls' college, College of Notre Dame, leading the way the city has a wealth of feminine beauty.

Wage Freeze Leaves S.M. Contract Talks Up in Air

County authorities were still attemting on Tuesday to determine the impact of the President's new economic program on county government.

Deputy District Attorney James Foley said he is convinced that "automatic" merit increases that fall due during the 90-day price-wage freeze must be deferred.

Foley said his interpretation of the Economic Stabilization Act of 1970, upon which the Nixon package is based, also leads him to believe that employes, even though they might be promoted during the period of the freeze, must continue to work at their old salary.

County Manager M. D. Tarshes disagreed with the interpretation, however.

"If you can't promote a patrolman to sergeant," he asked, "could you hire a srgeant from outside the department?"

Foley has been assigned by District Attorney Keith C. Sorenson to research the matter and find answers to the many questions that arise. Foley said he has been trying to talk to someone in the Office of Wage and Price Control, opened Monday in San Francisco, but the phone has been busy every time he has called.

The situation was likewise confused in city contract arrangements with employes. City of San Mateo officials and employes, with their wage agreements partly approved, were seeking clarification.

Foley said there is no reason why county officials cannot continue to negotiate with employe representatives on 1972 salaries and benefits while the freeze is in effect.

The deputy noted that many teachers' contracts, negotiated earlier, call for pay increases to be effective September 1. They will have to wait until after the freeze is lifted, Foley said.

Another problem concerns 50 houses, acquired by the county in park or road right-of-way projects, which are being leased by the county to private parties until the land is needed.

S.M. to Seek Employment Fund Share

County Manager M. D. Tarshes was authorized by the Board of Supervisors today to apply for San Mateo County's share of federal funds available under the Emergency Employment Act.

Tarshes said all counties and cities over 75,000 population will get shares of the fund, appropriated by Congress in an effort to ease unemployment.

The City of San Mateo, Tarshes said, has been allocated $236,000, and the remainder of the county $568,900. The latter sum, he said, is to be shared by the county, the other 18 cities, and school and special districts.

Sears Recalls Bikes

Sears is continuing its efforts to locate three models of mini-bikes for replacement of fuel tanks, according to George G. Gaugler, district manager of the firm's mid-California retail stores.

Gaugler identified the mini-bike models, which have been marketed since February, as numbers 80716, 80717 and 807660. He said that in a few cases tanks on the vehicles, when used at igh speeds over rough terrain, have experienced gas line leakage.

"Although we have no reports of injury," he said, "we fee there is a potential hazard and urge customers who have purchased such mini-bikes to return them for fuel tank replacement."

The company is contacting known customers. Because there is a possibility hat all owners cannot be identified, he company urges purchasers of Sears mini-bikes since February to check model identification.

Decisions on Greens Postponed

South San Francisco councilmen Monday night delayed for one week the setting of tax rates for the city's various special maintenance assessment districts.

The postponement until 5 p.m. next Monday came at the request of Westborough resident Don Gamma. Gamma asked that the homeowner groups in the affected areas be given an opportunity to study the financial condition of the districts.

Of specific concern is a newly established district in West Park, referred to as West Park Number 3. City Manager Gale Dreisbach has indicated that in order to raise enough money to maintain the common greens a tax rate of more than $3 may be necessary.

The district already in operation, West Park 1 and 2, has a present assessment of $1.05. Dreisbach explained that it may be necessary to raise this to as much as $1.30.

Gamma said residents have indicated concern to him by placing hand-written notes in his mailbox while he was on vacation.

Cat Bites Woman

Mrs. Hal Hendrickson of 633 Keoncrest Drive, South San Francisco, was attacked by a stray cat that wandered out of the mountains while she was vacationing with her family on Clear Lake.

The family and local citizens spent several days attempting to locate the cat to no avail.

Mrs. Hendrickson is currently undergoing the ravies inoculations at Letterman Army Hospital.

Call It What You Like; It's Still Gerrymandering

By JOHN CURRY

Any decision by Assemblyman Leo J. Ryan (D-South San Francisco) to run for Congress next year will have to wait for reapportionment which is now being studied in Sacramento.

Robert Caughlan, Ryan's field secretary, said yesterday Ryan was "looking at it very seriously," but would have to decide later when he knows what sort of district he will have.

It's no secret Ryan has considered running for congress. He has been in the assembly for the past nine years.

San Mateo County likely will be reapportioned in some way because its populaton in all its legislative districts has grown far above the accepted norms.

Caughlan and John Gilroy, the latter a field representative of State Senator Arlen F. Gregorio (D-San Mateo) say it appears that reapportionment won't be finished before the end of September at the earliest. The reapportionment would be based on the 1970 census.

Ideal population sizes for the new districts following the 1970 census would be: For State Senate, 498,828, for assembly, 249,414 and for congress 464,026, according to figures from Gregorio's office.

At present, Gregorio's county-wide 12th Senatorial District is 57,406 over its optimum size, Ryan's district is 46,100 over, Republican Assemblyman Dixon Arnett's 26th District in south San Mateo County is 11,300 over and Republican Rep. Paul N. McCloskey, Jr.'s 11th Congressional District is 73,796 over.

There will be five new congessinal seats in California after reapportionment, Gilroy said, with one of them in the Bay Area. Since it is new with no incumbent, it's likely that most terest will center on it, he noted, particularly since it appears also that new district would be on the Peninsula.

If it is the state senate district would contain roughly the same area, Gilroy said. "We have to lose some people," he said. "We can't hang on to all of San Mateo County."

There's also the possibility that wherever the new congressional district line is drawn through San Mateo County, McCloskey could take his choice in which district he would run.

Democratic votes carried him to victories in 1967, 1968 and 1970 and the GOP challenger to President Nixon for next year's presidential nomination isn't likely to want to give those up.

There's a possibility he could be redistricted away from his main base of support in San Mateo County. Some of the south county could perhaps be amalgamated into an upper middle-class area of north Santa Clara County, which could be conservative Republican.

McCloskey, no favorite of conservatives, then might find his salvation in the rest of San Mateo County. State law requires only that a congressman reside in California and doesn't specify that he live in the district he represents.

But the prospect of a Ryan vs. McCloskey contest for congress next year may not hold much appeal for a large number of central and north county liberals and conservatives, who have voted for or against both in past elections.

Dave Nicklaus, McCloskey's field secretary in San Mateo, said yesterday McCloskey does intend to run again for congress, but in which district must be decided later

McCloskey has sold his home in Portola Valley and resides locally in a guest house in Atherton.

A reapportionment committee in each house of the state legislature must work out a complete bill for all three kinds of districts, with all then going to a conference committee.

The senate and assembly versions for their own redistricting are usually accepted, Gilroy said. The senate and assembly reapportionment committees and the state's congresssional delegation then work out the congressional line-drawing.

Both legislative houses have hired separate outside firms to develop and analyze data on reapportionment, Gilroy said.

The project must be finished before the end of the year or the matter will go to state courts for settlement.

Caughlin predicted there would be many compromises but little or no gerrymandering and that most people would be happy with the reapportionment.

This would be because despite the 42-37 Democratic majority, a veto of a reapportionment bill by Gov. Ronald Reagan would require a two-thirds vote to override and it isn't likely to happen. "A lot will have to be done to pacify the Republicans," Caughlin said.

One reason Ryan may be waiting is because of a number of other things that may happen under redistricting, according to Ron Youngren, Arnett's field secretary.

Among these is a crossing of the San Mateo-San Francisco County line by state legislative districts for the first time. San Francisco has too many assemblymen for its population, so one idea is for Democrat Leo McCarthy's district to expand south to take in all or part of Daly City.

This would cut out the excess populationand the 26th and 27th districts could be re-boundaried in central San Mateo County. One suggestion that Youngren said has been considered would give to Arnett all of Burlingame and some of Millbrae now held by Ryan. The area east of El camino Real from San Mateo to the Santa Clara County line would be in the 27th district.

Since most of the county's minority groups and less affluent reside in the latter area, it is expected it would go even more heavily Democratic, while the 26th could become more solidly Republican.

By any other name the process of lumping like-minded voters together is still called gerrymandering.

A prime case of that, according to Youngren, might befall a new congressional district involving south San Mateo County. This might be a fat pie-shaped district taking in the Stanford University community and flaring to the San Mateo County Coastside, there to run south and take in all of largely conservative Santa Cruz and Monterey Counties, Youngren went on.

This might be called an "agricultural" or "coastal belt" district but the little knob of liberal territory at the apex of the wedge around Stanford still would be gerrymandering, he said.

A reason for that would be that Rep. Charles S. Gubser (R-Gilroy), whose district includes the wealthy Los Altos Hills and west Palo Alto areas into which part of McCloskey's 11th District normally might expand, doesn't want to give up his rich source of campaign contributions, Youngren noted.

Another part of the Republican pacification program might be to expand Democratic State Senator George Moscone's San Francisco district to take in Daly City and all or part of South San Francisco, Youngren said.

This would result in Gregorio having less of a Democratic voter registration edge in what he had left of San Mateo County.

If Congressional redistricting should follow the State Senate lines generally, it could mean also that Ryan's race for Congress might be effected by cutting him off from both a major source of support and many prospective opponents in Daly City, Youngren noted.

"It's our opinion also," he went on, "that all 40 state senators will have to run in 1972 for either two-year or four-year terms because of the reapportionment. The elections could be forced by taxpayers' suits because some people will be represented by new legislators they hadn't voted for two years ago. I understand that the Democrats and the Mexican-American groups, among others, have suits all ready to go."

Reaction to Economic Move

particulars of the President's package.

"Generally speaking," he said, "moves to bring inflation under control are desirable, but I don't know enough about what is being proposed to comment further. We have no idea how it will affect local government agencies."

Tarshes said information on the program is expected soon from the National Association of Counties and the County Supervisors Association of California.

The county manager noted that, unless the freeze is extended, the 90 days will have passed before pay raises for county government employes would go into effect January 1.

Conti doubted that the freeze would apply to the built-in anniversary merit pay increases due county employes.

Jack Tordoff, the president of the Peninsula Manufacturers' Association, said he was still trying to understand the President's program.

He said a great deal of questions were unanswered this morning, especially those concerned with the machinery to implement the plan.

"No machinery has been laid out yet," he said. "And that's a pretty crucial item."

He said there was no accurate way to judge the impact of the decision at this time.

In the North County, The Times interviewed a number of people on the streets of San Bruno this morning.

These were some of their reactions:

One industrial worker said he didn't think wage and price controls were fair.

This man's contract has been settled. He feels safe for another year. Some individuals under three year contracts, which have not been signed, have complained that they are still getting wages they received three years ago and the food prices have not stayed at that level, he said.

A commuter was busy reading the sports pages. "It should stop the wage-price spiral," he said nonchalantly. He said it really didn't concern him because he worked on a salary plus commission basis.

Another young man, a summer employe on a housing construction site who is a graduate of Stanford University, said he has heard talk all summer about the need for wage and price controls. "I couldn't agree more with the President."

An electrician on the same job, whose contract has been settled, thinks it's a good idea.

"We make a good salary," he said. "We're just pricing ourselves out of the market. I'm an electrician. But I can't afford to have a plumbing contractor come to my house."

Democratic Assemblyman Leo Ryan of the 27th District said, "The significant lack of economic leadership in the White House has long been obvious and although the President has finally taken some steps in the right direction there are a number of enormous weaknesses in the proposal.

Thompson Stages Dance Sets

Boyd Thompson of South San Francisco has staged the dance sequences for the Millbrae Players' latest production "The Un-Enchanted Prince."

The original musical by Michael Kohl and Jeffrey Colton, both of San Francisco, is currently playing at the Little Theatre, 255 Broadway, Friday and Saturday nights at 8:30.

Thompson, 24, learned to love the theatre about the same time he learned to read and has been involved ever since.

His extensive training in the field of dance and dramatic aspirations led him to the College of San Mateo Drama Department where he received his A.A. degree in dramatic arts.

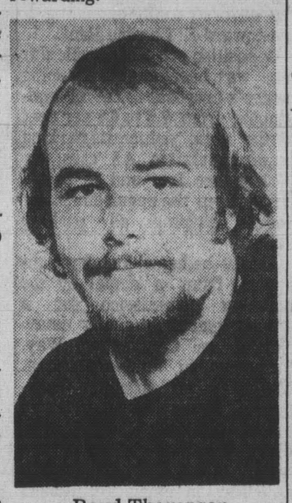
While attending, he performed or worked on Hamlet, Little Mary Sunshine, The Birds, Waiting for Godot, American Dream, Zoo Story, Picnic, Mar-at-Sade, Crucibal, Send Me No Flowers, The Miser, Valponie and Oh, What a Lovely War.

His credits with the Players include "Magic Lamp," and "Androcles and the Lion." Recently, he did the choreography for the Daly City Recreation Department's dramatic production of "Once Upon a Mattress."

Married to Brenda Thompson, whom he met at the College of San Mateo, Thompson's future plans include a stint at Chico State College where he hopes to work toward his masters degree in dramatic arts and someday teach.

Now, he spends his spare time working with the Players, finding it both a pleasure and a challenge.

"The Millbrae Players is a group full of great and wonderful heritage. It is one of the oldest community theatres in the Bay Area, yet remains young and alive. It is demanding, yet rewarding."



Boyd Thompson

He calls working on an original musical challenging and exciting.

"I have had the advantage of being able to bend with the director and composer and them bending with me. It's been thrilling seeing the converted firehouse theatre first turn into a beehive of excitement and enthusiasm, then into the beautiful kingdom of the "Un-Enchanted Prince."

"The size of the stage and dancing area limited me at first; also keeping in mind the characters, each one different and dynamic and needing to remain that way in the dance sequences, simply an extension of their characterization.

"At first it seemed impossible, then a challenge.

"Thanks to the hard working cast, which to a man never stopped trying, that difficult task of choreographing this show seemed to get easier and easier.

"My thanks and congratulations go out to the actors and technical crew who have worked long and hard to make this production a success."

Public Hearing Monday on Tanforan Expansion

A public hearing on the controversial expansion program of Tanforan Park Shopping Center will be held at next Monday's meeting of the San Bruno City Council.

Although the expansion itself is being greeted with enthusiasm from virtually all quarters, there are certain details of it which caused it to squeeze past the planning commission on a 3-2 vote.

The Hapsmith Co. is seeking a revision in its Planned Development Zoning to permit it to:

1. Build a three-story parking structure between Huntington Avenue and Penneys.
2. Add a third major department store — the Emporium.
3. Ad a "grand mall" to link the present covered mall to the Emporium.
4. Add a 10,000 square foot "free-standing" building in what is now the parking lot, fronting on El Camino Real.
5. A westward extension of the covered mall, extending it out toward El Camino Real.

Opposition to the particular plan was based on the shopping center's proposal to cut its landscaping from 7.5 to 6.5 per cent of the area, reduce its parking requirements to 4.5 cars per 1000 square feet and to be excused from the requirement for double striping all parking stalls.

Also to be heard Monday is an appeal from a denial by the planning commission for a 38-unit apartment-duplex development on Cunningham Way, formerly old Junipero Serra. Neighbors on adjoining Hawthorne Avenue have protested the project and planners criticized the plan as requesting variances while providing for no amenities in exchange. Robert Berryman, former Consolidated Lands Co. partner, stressed the low density, 21 to 22 units per acre, proposed widening of the street, plus extensive landscaping.

$2,000,000 Paving Job at S.F. Airport

A $2,000,000 paving job at San Francisco International Airport has been approved by airport commissioners.

The work will be done by United Air Lines, at UAL's huge maintenance base on the north end of the airport, and at no cost to the city of San Francisco.

Commissioners also agreed to ask the federal government for $713,939 from the new U.S. Airport Development Fund, to finance runway and taxiway improvements during the coming year.

Airports manager James K. Carr said the runway work would supplement the $20,000,000 airport improvement and expansion program now under way.

A major item of the federally funded work, he said, would be a high-speed turn-off for runway 19-Left, to increase the capacity of that runway during bad weather operations.

"We hope to have this work completed before the winter storms," he said.

S.S.F. Areas Could Face Money Pinch

South San Francisco's West Park Maintenance Districts are facing a financial crisis that could mean a sharp assessment raise for residents in those districts.

West Park Units 1 and 2, which combine into one assessment district, already has a $1.05 per $100 evaluation assessment. City Manager Gale Dreisbach said because of the increased cost of maintenance it may be necessary to raise that assessment to $1.30.

A second assessment district, West Park Unit 3, recently formed has yet to have the initial assessment set. Dreisbach said that in order to bring in enough revenue to meet the proposed budget an assessment of more than $3 may be required for that district.

Councilmen must make a decision on the matter at their Monday night meeting. Prior to that time, Dreisbach intends to get together with the city staff and developers in the area to work out a solution that may reduce the need for significant increased assessments.

Dreisbach said the logical solution would be to cut back on the hurried installation of the common greens. They apparently are being placed in faster than revenues from the assessment district come in. And, it's not enough revenue.

When the first assessment district was started the city benevolently granted an advance from the general fund to aid the district until the assessment could cover the cost.

Preparation Begins For School Year

Westmoor class schedules for the 1971-1972 school year will be mailed to the students' homes during the last week in August, according to Paul Perez, assistant principal-guidance for Westmoor High School.

Students who need to change their programs because of classes taken in summer school or whose programs are in error, should telephone Westmoor High School (756-3434) to make an appointment with their respective counselor.

The counselors will be available to make only program error and summer school necessitated changes on September 2, but students must have an appointment.

Students new to the district are encouraged to telephone the school for an appointment now. Those students can be scheduled into classes and receive their schedules before school begins September 13.

All students new to Westmoor are also invited to attend the school's annual Orientation Assembly in the Boy's Gym on September 2 at 8:30 a.m. Student Body Officers, who are in charge of the program, will explain the co-curricular, school program and conduct guided tours of the school.

Two Bellboys Help Capture S.S.F. Suspect

Two bellboys turned sleuths aided South San Francisco police in the capture of a man charged with a burglary in the Holiday Inn, 245 South Airport Boulevard.

Police booked Joseph E. Tucker, 31, of Novato, at 1 a.m. yesterday. He was arrested when police stopped his vehicle on East Grand Avenue near Roebling Way.

Inside the vehicle police said they found a color television, lamps, bedding, water pitcher and glasses and towels, among other items of property.

According to police the bellboys saw a man leaving the hotel in a station wagon with what appeared to be a load of hotel property.

The employes jumped into the hotel shuttle van, which is radio equipped for transmission to the hotel, and followed the station wagon.

According to police the bellboys relayed back to the hotel the direction of the suspect's vehicle. An employe of the hotel subsequently relayed this message to the police, who gave chase and made the arrest.

Two Men Rob Finance Firm

Two men, one with a gun, held up the Beneficial Finance Company, 386 Grand Ave., South San Francisco, Monday afternoon and escaped with $417.50.

Police said the men entered the office at about 4:30 and approached the counter. One revealed a short-barreled revolver and demanded money.

Broadmoor Asked Data

Officials of the Broadmoor Police Protection District have been asked to report to the County Board of Supervisors next Tuesday on what progress, if any, has been made toward annexing the district to Daly City.

A proposal to advance $60,000 in county funds to the district so it can pay its bills until taxes start coming in has been delayed by the board until then.

The board last year agreed to support special legislation giving the financially strapped district some extra tax revenue on condition that annexation talks be started. The bill increased the maximum tax rate for the district from ¾ of 1 per cent per $100 of assessed valuation to a full 1 per cent, for the 1971-72 fiscal year only.

Mayor Bernard J. Lycett of Daly City told the county board that it became apparent at the second meeting on anexation, held July 27, that the talks were getting nowhere.

"As the conversation continued," Lycett said, "it became evident that we were not talking about the same thing. In fact . . . the discussion by them was that it was the decision of their people to remain as they were."

Broadmoor Police Chief Ray Savage said today that the residents met with Daly City officials in good faith but told them, in response to a question, that they doubted that the voters of the district would approve annexation at this time.

Letters to the Editor

Editor, The Post:

We are writing because of the recent articles we have read about the San Mateo County Welfare Department's need for more foster parents.

We happen to have been foster parents for the past year. But we found it necessary to drop out because we could not, in good conscience, condone the actions of the Welfare Department.

We were asked to accept children in our home and include them as members of a family unit. We were asked to accept the responsibility of giving these children guidance, affection and security, and this we did. We accepted three teen-agers, with the special problems of that age group, into our home. We were aware that there would be some difficulties in adjustment for them, but with kindness and love we hoped to help them develop self-confidence and a sense of security.

Now we realize we were defeated before we started. We were expected to accept all the responsibilities of parents, but when any misunderstandings occurred between the children and us we had absolutely no support or respect for our judgment from the agency. The teen-agers were right — we were out of line. Our rights as mature, thinking adults were completely undermined by the social workers.

We feel we have an obligation to those readers who may be considering being foster parents, to tell it like it is.

The Welfare Agency doesn't want foster parents for teen-agers, they want custodians. That is all the authority the parents have.

We hope we have helped some parents avoid falling into the trap we so gullibly did.

Mr. and Mrs. W. Vavruska,
San Bruno.

Editor, The Post:

Supervisor Day's attempt to make a joke of the tax situation is exactly what my observance of his attitude would lead me to expect.

When I appeared before the Board of Supervisors, requesting (homeowner's) property tax relief, both as an individual, and later as an official of People's Revolt Against (Homeowner's) Taxes, I noted at least polite attention, mostly with no comment, by most of the members of the Board.

Supervisor Day did little to hide the fact he thought "Tax Revolt" was rather amusing. In fact, there were one or two times I wanted to ask him, judging from the grin on his face, just what was so funny, so I could laugh, also.

His remarks about legalizing prostitution and gambling which he knows very well are ridiculous, in order to gain tax dollars are twofold in effect:

1. They certainly got him attention;

2. They are indeed indicative of what I feel is a jocular attitude towards a very serious situation—namely, the fact that homeowner's property tax must be revised downward, since it is a regressive tax and leads only to the poor becoming poorer, or, in some cases, giving up their homes altogether!

RUTH H. HARRIS,

Proper Road Habits

Many accidents are caused by motorists who do not take advantage of road construction which has been designed so as to provide easier entry and exit to and from freeways.

Actually, by proper use of the added acceleration and deceleration lanes a motorist can enter and leave a freeway by smoothly flowing into or out of the freeway lanes by using the added acceleration-deceleration lane to increase or decrease their speed.

We'll take the San Bruno Avenue—Bayshore Freeway as an example. Motorists eastbound on the San Bruno Avenue overpass and desiring to enter the freeway so as to go to San Francisco should, as they are finishing their long turn down the offramp, look over their left shoulder or in their sideview mirror and determine how near or far back the northbound vehicles on the freeway are — this should most certainly be done without stopping on the offramp.

The motorists should then, when entering the acceleration lane, increase their speed until they are going the same speed as that being traveled by the vehicles in the slow lane on the freeway. This, then, will permit both the vehicle entering the freeway and that traffic already on the freeway to blend together with the least trouble.

Motorists northbound on the freeway who desire to come into San Bruno should not slow down while in the normal traffic lane. They should pull into the decelerating lane as soon as they can, blending with that traffic coming onto the freeway to head north, and all deceleration should be done on the far righthand paved area, off of the main freeway lanes.

Another local area at which motorists do not take advantage of the built-in aides is the Millbrae Avenue—El Camino intersection. There is an acceleration lane provided so as to permit westbound Millbrae Avenue traffic to make a right turn to proceed north on El Camino. This right turn lane is constructed so as to permit the turning motorist to enter El Camino at a speed equal to that of the normal flow of traffic and to smoothly blend into that traffic flow.

Those motorists who stop on the acceleration lanes so as to wait for an opening in the traffic lane are inviting a rearend accident and most certainly shouldn't be on the busy roadways if they have the feeling that they are going to drive their car the way they want to regardless of the manner expected of all motorists.

Rodeo Comes to Daly City

A different kind of rodeo is coming to Daly City's Cow Palace August 28th and 29th. It is the National Mexican Festival and Rodeo.

The show stars Tony Aguilar, Mexican motion picture and recording star and his actress-wife, Flor Silvestre.

The rodeo is authentically Mexican. Bull and bronc riding are done Mexican style, with no time clock. The test goes on until the animal stops bucking or the rider signals to stop. The winner is graded not only on endurance, but on skill and daring.

As in Mexico, daredevil charros leap from one galloping bronco to another in the Paso de la Muerte, the Pass of Death. Horses jump through rings of fire, skilled cowboys rope wild mares, Portuguese horses take on the bulls they were bred to fight.

Curious Customer Aids Police

Curiosity of a liquor store owner and a customer led to the arrest of three persons last week on charges of passing counterfeit $10 bills.

South San Francisco police booked two 21-year-old San Francisco males and a 17-year-old companion. A second 17-year-old female was released without being charged.

Turned over to federal authorities in San Francisco were Carl E. Jones, an unemployed cook, and Percy L. Longs, an employe of a utility company. The female juvenile was placed in custody of San Francisco juvenile authorities.

The sequence of events began at 10 p.m. at LaDora Liquors, 604 W. San Bruno Avenue, San Bruno, police said.

A man came into the store to make a purchase. He handed owner Louis Bacigalupi a $10 bill. Bacigalupi was skeptical of the bill but accepted it. He relayed his skepticism to customer David Jenkins.

According to San Bruno police, Jenkins decided to see where the man presenting the $10 bill went. He followed the car, which also contained another man and two young females, to South San Francisco.

Jenkins watched the second man go into Town Liquors, 301 Grand Avenue to make a purchase with a $10 bill. He immediately raced to the South San Francisco police station. Officers responded to the liquor store.

Broadmoor Police Loan Approved

A $60,000 loan to tide the Broadmoor Police Protection District over until tax revenues start coming in was approved last week by the County Board of Supervisors.

The board indicated, however, that there will be no more loans unless the district has made definite steps toward annexing to Daly City.

The same indication was made last year when the board approved an $85,000 loan and later endorsed special legislation to increase the district's tax rate for one year in order to build up its reserves. The legislation boosts the rate from ¾ of 1 per cent of the assessed taxable valuation to a full 1 per cent.

District Commissioner John McCloskey told the board that two meetings were held woth Daly City officials about annexing but nothing came of them.

"You can't very well negotiate in a shotgun wedding," McCloskey said, "and that's what this amounted to."

McCloskey said Daly City officials tried to get the legislation killed and that became another problem in negotiating with them.

Residents of the unincorporated Broadmoor area have made several unsuccessful tries to incorporate their own city. In turning down the last attempt last year, the Local Agency Formation Commission urged annexation to Daly City.

"I don't think the people have been sold," McCloskey told the supervisors. "They're hard to convince, you know."

In approving the loan, members of the board offered to help in future negotiations.

SF Man Hurt in Wreck

A San Francisco man was in extremely critical condition today at Peninsula Hospital after South San Francisco firemen extricated him from his demolished sports car Friday afternoon.

Henry Ward, 22, of 1936 Quesada Street, San Francisco, apparently lost control of his car of East Grant Street in South San Francisco and smashed into a parked sedan on the opposite side of the street.

Using power-operated forcible entry tools, firemen were able to free Ward's left leg which was pinned by part of the motor, fire captain Edwin Simpson said.

Simpson said Ward was an employe of the Fuller Paint Company located in that city and was driving along the street about 4:43 p.m. when his car went out of control.

He was rushed to Peninsula Hospital with severe head injuries and multiple fractures.

When contacted this morning South San Francisco police said they had no knowledge of the accident.

Weather Forecasts Around-The-Clock

Pacifica recently became one of the first communities in the United States to receive 24-hour weather conditions and forecasts from the National Weather Service by FM cable.

The weather service is part of Pacifica Cable Company's major expansion of FM radio broadcast services, which also include 20 channels of high-fidelity reception in mono and stereo of music from hard rock to traditional Bach.

"Pacifica's geographical setting, while breathtaking to behold, has limited FM radio reception to only a few stations," stated Joe Burgess, Pacifica Cable's general manager.

"Now, 20 of the leading metropolitan FM stations are available on the cable system for customers.

A small additional charge for FM is authorized by the franchise as granted by the Pacifica city government," he added.

The 24-hour FM weather service provides forecasts which are updated every six hours and local observations from selected locations which are revised every three hours. Storm warnings and other emergency conditions are provided on an up-to-the-minute schedule. Spacial ski reports are broadcast during the season.

The National Weather Service has installed transmitting facilities in most major marine centers in the past two years. The program calls for a rapid expansion of the service into inland areas as funds are made available for this U.S. Department of Commerce Agency. Broadcasts are normally received on special VHF receivers, on a frequency of 162.55 MHz.

Special equipment, recently installed by the cable company, receives the broadcast and retransmits in the cable system on the standard FM band.

Labor Council Favors Single Agency For All Conservation

The Central Labor Council of San Mateo County, AFL-CIO, has taken a strong position favoring a single Conservation and Development Agency for the Bay Area as spelled out in AB 1057.

"The need for regional planning and regional solutions to problems affecting the Bay Area is well documented," said Labor Council spokesmen.

"This Council supported the original Bay Conservation and Development Commission, and fully supports all efforts to develop a comprehensive regional plan to control Bay filling, transportation, environmental quality, open space, and regional parks."

The council believes regional planning has been criticized by representatives of local government who have been unwilling, or unable, in the past to solve the problems of pollution, water quality, transportation, Bay filling and open space.

"They complain they will lose local control, but the fact is the Regional Agency, as set up in AB 1057 will give the citizens of the nine Bay Area counties an opportunity to undertake and enforce a truly comprehensive plan under the direction of their own locally elected trustees."

The plan has also been attacked on the grounds that it will increase property taxes. "This is simply not true," say labor council spokesmen. "The bill specifically prohibits the financing of the Agency from property taxes."

Southwest Honeymoon Destination

Las Vegas, San Diego and Colorado are the honeymoon destinations of Mr. and Mrs. Gary Ronald Jacobson (Nancy Louise Kara) who were married at 1 p.m. Saturday at the Palo Alto Unitarian Church.

The newlyweds, who received felicitations at the same locale, are the respective children of Mrs. Louis Renner Kara of Pacifica, and Frank J. Kara of Westminster, and Mr. and Mrs. Norman L. Jacobson of Ames, Iowa.

The bride wore a long white dress of imported English lace with scalloped hem and cuffs. Her high scoop neckline was edged with a lace ruffle and a row of tiny seed pearls.

Sole attendant for her sister was Holly Elaine Kara who wore a periwinkle blue chiffon dress with a white lace peasant bodice. She carried a French nosegay of hot pink carnations and purple statice.

Harriss T. King of Menlo Park stood with Gary as best man.

For her daughter's wedding Mrs. Kara chose an azure blue crepe dress with white accessories. Mrs. Jacobson selected a watermelon pink voile costume with white lace trim and white accessories.

The new Mrs. Jacobson earned her bachelor of arts degree in English from the University of California at Davis. Her husband is an alumnus of Iowa State University who is now doing graduate studies in biochemistry at Stanford University. Judi Ann Jacobson of Ames is his sister.

The newlyweds will live in Palo Alto.

Where Has Summer Gone

Where has summer gone! Its time for school to begin, the garden needs pruning, the bar-be-que needs cleaning and the post cards announcing the first meeting of this club or that organization are beginning to arrive. Vacation time is over for another nine months so lets talk about one last outing before we settle back into that school year routine.

We bay area dwellers sometimes forget the charms of the state's interior sections and tend to overlook going sightseeing in such places as, for example, Sacramento, but that is what I am going to suggest this week. Go early and make a full day of it, coming home after the sun is set so that you can have a chance to witness one of those spectacular mooonrises that valley residents enjoy each harvest season.

If you are traveling with small chidren the hour and one half ride can be a slight problem but, you can break it with a unique side trip that is bound to delight the boys in the car, no matter how young, or old, they happen to be.

Rio Vista Junction, outside of Fairfield, is the home of the Bay Area Electric Railroad Association's museum and railyard and the entire premises is open to the public. Antique street cars creak and sway around a track and an ancient cable car sits regally enthroned atop a flat car. Elegant old lounge cars and chair cars from an era long since gone rest on sidings to be oogled and explored.

There is no charge for the use of the picnic area or for the exhibits but the association does welcome donations to assist it with the restoration work being done by volunteers who are all members of the association.

The spot is not elegant, the layout far from professional, but the devotees of electric railroading have mixed a lot of enthusiasm with much hard work to afford themselves and everyone else the opportunity to see and climb about on these huge relics of railroadings golden age.

Have a cold drink, let the kids wander about awhile then jump back into the car for the short hop to Sacramento and William Land Park, where, even in the hottest weather, the water, grass and shade appear cool. There are pony rides and play ground equipment, a wading pool and picnic area so you can get the feel of riding or driving out of your bones before you trek across town to Sutter's Fort and the very excellent Indian Museum. The fort, the attractive grounds surrounding it and the Indian Artifacts in the State Indian Museum, should occupy the remainder of the day without difficulty.

Before starting home have dinner in Old Sacramento, the recreation of the city as it was at the start of this century, located at Front and Third Streets. The project to convert one of the city's worst slums into a tourist mecca isn't completed as yet but there has been enough work done to make it an interesting spot to browse about.

If everyone is in the mood for a scenic ride home plan to come back through the delta region and enjoy the quaint bridges and little towns scattered along the lanquid course of the Sacramento River.

It's a lazy way to end a day and a rather relaxed not to wind up the summer. I hope it has been a good vacation for your family.

Next week this column will be devoted to club activities, women's programs, weddings, showers, parties and whatever is important to you. If you have news, write or call me today, lets get back in the swing of things.

D.C. Knights Get 2 Awards

Marian Council No. 3773 of Daly City has been presented with two awards from Supreme Headquarters, Knights of Columbus, according to Grand Knight Tom Curr.

The council was presented with a portrait of His Holiness Pope Paul VI in recognition of outstanding achievement in membership recruitment during the Papal Tribute Program in 1971. The painting by Luigi Filocamo shows the Pope in his miter, holding a crosier in his left hand and blessing his flock with his right.

In addition, the council was presented with the Star Council Award for fulfilling it's membership quota during 1970-1971.

B'nai Israel Honors Past President

Congregation B'nai Israel honored one of its past presidents on his 60th birthday at a special Oneg Shabbat following Sabbath services recently.

Julius Michaelis, president in 1963, 1964 and 1969, was surprised by a large number of congregational friends who attended services on July 30, not only to observe the Sabbath, but to bring him their good wishes.

An inspirational service conducted by Cantor Henry Greenberg and Rabbi Solomon A. Shore, who came out of retirement for the occasion, was followed by a "haymish" Oneg Shabbat.

To further add to Mr. Michaelis' pleasure at being honored were many notes and donation of prayer books and funds to the Congregation in his honor.

A resident of Daly City for 12 years, Michaelis has served on the Board of Directors of the Congregation for 10 years, has done extensive work with the Regional Division and the Youth Commission of the United Synagogue of America, and has worked on Community Public Relations.

He has also served on the Daly City Citizens Committee for General Plan Review and on the Parks and Recreation sub-committee, which is responsible for the Westmoor High School swimming pool.

Michaelis lives with his wife, Hilde, and son, Tony, in the Westlake section of Daly City. Another son lives in Sunnyvale.

Diamonds Are A Girl's Best...

You can't depend upon your own experience entirely when buying a diamond — as you can when buying a bunch of carrots. But, by following these simple guidelines, you can be more sure of getting what you want as well as what you pay for.

Choose a reliable jeweler. This is especially important when buying diamonds.

You must be able to rely on the jeweler's integrity. Know the reputation of the jeweler. Check with your Better Business Bureau before you buy.

Know your budget. You can help your jeweler find the stone you want by telling him how much you want to spend. Price may determine to some extent, the variations of cut, size, color and perfection of the gem you choose.

Size doesn't always mean quality.

Diamonds are measured in carats, 141¾ carats equal an ounce. Remember, in diamonds, its quality not quantity that counts. Good things can come in both large and small quantities. How important is color? Most diamonds have some color. It's the amount of color that makes the difference.

The most desirable stone has a total absence of color. Don't be misled by the term "blue white." Most reliable jewelers refrain from using this description, because these gems are exceptionally rare. Probably you'll never see a truly "blue white" stone. What about clarity?

Flawless stones are almost impossible to find. But the fewer the flaws or blemishes, the better the diamond. Look for the choicest cut. Accuracy in cutting a diamond is imperative.

To bring out the full brilliance of the stone, it must be properly cut. Your jeweler will show you a variety of cutting styles — round, pear, emerald, marquise, and square are the most popular. Each has its own advantages.

In the final analysis, your taste and budget will be the determining factors.

Give the stone a proper setting. And there are a number to choose from.

The metal and method of manufacture will set the price. Be sure to find out about the durability of the setting you choose. Ask your salesman for full details.

A diamond is an investment.

Its purchase should be approached carefully.

But the dividends are well worth the price. Ask the lady in your life, she'll tell you.

NELL NORTON

Sugar 'n Spice

Good morning, good cooks.

It's a pleasure to find a recipe for a fancy meatloaf. This first recipe certainly fits the description of "fancy" for it is actually a meat roll with sliced boiled ham and Mozzarella cheese rolled into it's center and a topping of melted cheese. It looks and tastes delicious. my thanks to Ruth Sosa for sharing it with us.

SICILIAN MEAT ROLL

2 beaten eggs
three-fourth cu psoft bread crumbs (1 slice)
1 cup tomato juice
2 Tablespoons snipped parsley
½ teaspoon oregano, crushed
¼ teaspoon each salt and pepper
1 small clove garlic, minced
2 pounds lean ground beef
8 thin slices boiled ham
6 oz (½ cups) shredded Mozzarella cheese
3 slices Mozzarella cheese

Combine the two beaten eggs, three-fourths cup bread crumbs, half cup tomato juice, two tablespoons parsley, half teaspoon oregano, fourth teaspoon each salt and pepper and the small minced garlic clove. Stir in the two pounds ground beef.

Using a large piece of foil, pat and shape the meat into a 1 x10 rectangle. Arrange the eight slices boiled ham on meat, leave margin at edges. Sprinkle the cup and half of grated cheese over ham. Starting at short end, carefully roll up meat using foil to help lift it. Seal edges and ends.

Place roll in 13x9x2-inch pan. Bake in 350 degree oven for 1 hour and 15 minutes. Cut the three slices cheese in half diagonally and place the cheese wedges over top of the meat roll 5 minutes before done and allow cheese to melt.

When you slice the roll the center will be pink thanks to the slices of ham. Very attractive. Serves 8.

A nice accompaniment to this meat roll, or for that matter, a delicious and colorful vegetable dish to serve with any meal, is this next recipe.

DE LUXE PEAS AND CELERY

2 Tablespoons butter
½ cup celery, cut on bias into half inch slices
1 can (3-oz.) sliced mushrooms, drained
2 Tablespoons sliced green onions
2 Tablespoons chopped pimento
½ teaspoon salt
¼ teaspoon savory
Dash pepper
1 pkg. (10-oz.) frozen peas, cooked and drained

Melt two tablespoons butter in skillet. Add the half cup celery, drained mushrooms, two tablespoons each green onions and pimento, half teaspoon salt, fourth teaspoon savory and dash pepper. Cook uncovered stirring frequently until celery is cooked, but still crisp. Add the hot cooked peas, mix well. Serves 4.

With Gravenstein apples on the market now it seems a good time to bake an apple crisp. This dish is different with cheese melting through the apples as they bake and a thick crumbly crust.

APPLE CHEESE CRISP

5 medium Gravenstein apples
1 cup grated brick cheese
1 cup flour
two-thirds cup sugar
½ teaspoon salt
½ cube margarine

Dice but do not peel the five apples. Place in a lightly greased 9x5x3 loaf pan. Sprinkle the cup grated cheese over top.

Mix together the one cup flour, two-thirds cup sugar and half teaspoon salt. Cut in the half cube margarine until crumbly. Place on top of cheese.

Bake in 350-degree oven about 40 to 45 minutes, or until apples are cooked.

Serve while still warm.

Read Carefully

Do you read ads with your eyes shut?

You can miss vital information if you don't read an ad carefully. There's a lot to learn from the words and illustrations in ads, so keep your eyes open. Most merchants want you to be familiar with their products and store policy. They give you valuable information so you can make intelligent purchases. But retail language is sometimes confusing. Be alert to what the retailer is telling you.

Read the ad carefully. Don't overlook the small print or the illustrations.

When the storekeeper indicates that "quantities are limited," or urges you to "come in while they last," believe him. There won't be many of what he's offering.

If an item is being sold "as is" you should look for damage or flaws. Evaluate "seconds" or "irregulars" carefully, too. These can be great values if you know what you're buying.

Be sure you recognize the difference between list price, regular price and comparable value.

The list price is suggested by the manufacturer. The regular price may differ from the list price, depending on the merchant. But it's the one at which the store usually sells a product. A comparable value is the price at which a product would normally sell if the merchant regularly kept it in stock.

Use of comparable values most often indicates that the items were specially purchased for a sale event.

Know the policies of the stores where you shop. You'll see them marked clearly in their ads.

Note such disclaimers as "all sales final," "charge for delivery," and "no refunds or deposits." They can have a bearing on what or how you buy.

The language in an ad can give you different sorts of clues, too. Extravagant wage claims and vague job descriptions in employment ads are particularly suspect. Don't be carried away by sweeping generalizations like "lowest prices," "world's largest," "never undersold," or "can't be beat."

No matter what the claim, be particular about what you purchase. The lowest price in the world won't make a bad buy better.

If after reading an ad you suspect a misprint or error, call the store to check. Mistakes are inevitable, and the merchant will be glad to have them pointed out to him.

Read an ad carefully. Understand its meaning. A good retail ad can be a real eye-opener.

Teens Dance

Salt of the Earth Youth Council of Daly City will be sponsoring a Benefit "Battle of the Bands" - Teen Dance on Friday for the Our Lady of Guadalupe health Center of Daly City.

ANOTHER AWARD — Brian Upton (right) manager of the Westlake office of American Savings and Loan Association, 5 Southgate Ave., Daly City, got a hearty handshake from John Wolfe, vice president and branch supervisor. Upton had just collected for his office, the American Savings quarterly "Branch Achievement Award" for high performance in savings operations and customer service. The branch won a plaque in competition among American Savings' 17-office Western Region, part of the company's 54 office branch system. This is the second time the Westlake office has been so honored this year.

Employment Visits Slated

Local representatives of the Bureau of the Census, U.S. Department of Commerce, will visit a number of Peninsula households this week to obtain information on employment here.

Charles M. Long, director of the Census Bureau office in Los Angeles, in making the announcement, said the households are among the 50,000 across the country that have been scientifically selected to represent a cross-section of the American people.

The survey, which the Bureau conducts each month for the U.S. Department of Labor, provides a continuing measure of employment and unemployment for the nation. For example, on a seasonally adjusted basis, the overall unemployment rate dropped from 6.2 per cent in May to 5.6 per cent in June. Total employment fell one-half million to 78.4 million, the same level as in March.

Housewife Who Studied First Aid Saves Child

A Millbrae housewife who took the time to study a poster on how to administer mouth-to-mouth resuscitation was credited today with saving the life of a nine-month-old neighbor child

Young Micheal, son of Mrs. Annette Pucci of 27 Evergreen Court, toppled head first into a bathroom toilet bowl while his mother was busy in another part of the house Friday.

When Mrs. Pucci saw what happened she pulled the baby out of the water-filled bowl and attempted to revive her son.

Rushing to neighbor Irene Wing's nearby home at 16 Evergreen Court the distraught mother pleaded for help.

Mrs. Wing began applying mouth-to-mouth breathing assistance to the young victim while the mother called the fire department.

According to Fireman Ray Bianconi, Mrs. Wing had recently studied a poster showing how to give aid in such cases.

He credited her with saving the child's life.

As fire department rescue units arrived at the Wing home shortly before 10 a.m. the baby started to cry, Bianconi said.

"When we left the house a few minutes later the baby was really wailing," Bianconi said.

Acting Police Chief in Colma Under Fire

A discussion on police protection for the City of Colma deteriorated into an argument between some members of the council during a regular meeting Wednesday night.

Councilwoman Rena Vallerga charged Ottoboni, son of Colma Mayor Raymond D. Ottoboni Sr., was not qualified to be a law enforcement officer "in any city."

"This man," Mrs. Vallerga said, gesturing towards the policeman, "is definitely not qualified."

She said the young police officer, a former mayor of the city, was unable to execute properly the necessary paperwork connected to the duties of a chief of police.

Ottoboni, a graduate of the College of San Mateo Police Academy, has been in the role of acting police chief since the death of Chief Dini Lagomarsino two months ago.

Ottoboni has been on Colma's one-man police department for the past 15 months.

"If our own local policeman can't cut the mustard he'll be the first to admit it," Councilman Earl Taylor noted.

Taylor asked the people of Colma to "give him a chance."

Also leaping to the defense of Officer Ottoboni was Councilman Glen E. Duncan who pointed out that the late Chief Lagomarsino never attended any formal police school.

One woman loudly informed the council, "Dini (Lagomarsino) had everyone's respect. Ottoboni has not."

The meeting had started quietly enough, with discussion of a draft contract for police protection with Broadmoor.

City Atty. Robert H. Cornell, after a meeting between Broadmoor police representatives and Councilman Wallace H. Honeywell, asked for comments on the new contract.

The proposed agreement would increase Broadmoor's charges from $1,000 to some $2,700 monthly.

It would be based on Colma's net assessed valuation, similar to the system now used in Broadmoor to support its police department.

Controlled

Brisbane firemen successfully stopped a fast-moving grass fire that threatened two major buildings in the Crocker Industrial Park Thursday afternoon.

The fire moved within a few feet of the Gate Rubber Company and American Can Company buildings before it was extinguished about 5:38 p.m.

Some 15 men using three trucks fought the three-acre blaze for more than an hour, a spokesman said.

Initiative Petition in Brisbane

Signatures on an initiative petition seeking to prohibit transportation of fill material from San Bruno Mountain through Brisbane are being checked by Brisbane officials.

The petition, circulated by several of the same people who succeeded in the fight against garbage dumping in Brisbane, demands that the City Council either enact a "truck and conveyor belt ordinance" or schedule a special election to let the voters decide.

It is expected that the matter will come back before the council at its August 23 meeting.

The petition, bearing 170 signatures, was submitted by Charles Kemp, a member of the Sierra Club and one of the leaders in the anti-garbage fight.

To qualify, the petition needs valid signatures of at least 15 per cent of the 1,105 registered voters in Brisbane, or a total of 166.

Richard Burr, one of the men backing the initiative, said it is aimed specifically against transporting fill material from San Bruno Mountain through Brisbane for the proposed Southern Crossing of the bay and the various bayfront development plans of Westbay Associates and others. It is also directed against the Pacific Cement and Aggregates quarry east of the town which has a contract with the city for use of city streets by its trucks.

The petition form has this to say about the proposed ordinance:

"This ordinance is necessary to protect the health, safety and welfare of the citizens of Brisbane.

Aiello Quits in Brisbane

The city of Brisbane is looking for a new city manager following the resignation last week of Eugene Aiello.

Aiello served for a year as part-time city manager, at $1,200 a month, following the resignation of Bruce A. Altman.

The official word at city hall this morning was "no comment" and Aiello could not be reached.

City Councilman S. J. Guardino, however, said that Aiello submitted his resignation to the council in an executive session Monday night. It was understood, he said, that Aiello wants to devote full time to his consulting service and does not want any permanent positions.

Aiello has offered to stay on without pay until a replacement is found, Dr. Guardino said, and assist the council in finding a successor. The council does not intend to advertise generally for candidates, Dr. Guardino said, but will consider making an appointment from a list to be provided by Aiello.

Stolen Autos Recovered

Daly City police have recovered five Volkswagen cars in the past two days from the vicinity of the Civic Center, it was learned today.

The cars had all been stolen in San Francisco and San Raphael in recent days, police said.

All but one of the cars had been stripped of their motors.

Investigators surmise the cars were stripped elsewhere and abandoned in Daly City—less than three blocks from the the police department.

U.S. Funds to County

San Mateo County has been allotted $568,000 in federal funds as its part of the Emergency Employment act signed Monday by President Nixon.

Dr. Edward Aguirre, the Labor Department's regional manpower administrator, said Thursday the money can be used for hiring additional policemen, firemen or professionals in an effort to place the unemployed in needed public services.

Grass Fire in San Bruno

Three fires apparently started by children swept over 85 acres of grass on San Bruno Avenue north of South San Francisco last week, a spokesman for the State Division of Forestry reported.

The third fire off Hillside Boulevard, which was reported at 9 p.m., burned 10 acres and would have threatened the 4-H Club if fog had not moved in, firemen said.

The first alarm was received at 5:35 p.m. from the South San Francisco fire department that a fire was burning off Randolph Avenue. Although this turned out to be only a spot fire, firemen were on their way to the scene when they received a radio report of a second grass fire several blocks away on Randolph Avenue.

Supervisors Vote to Apply for State Navigation Grant

A recommendation that the County Board of Supervisors apply for a grant from the State Department of Navigation and Ocean Development to plan completion of the Coyote Point Yacht Harbor was adopted Wednesday by the County Parks and Recreation Commission.

Acting Parks and Recreation Director John T. Brook Jr. recommended the action, reporting that the state agency has sufficient funds available, up to $50,000, to finance the study, which also would include a financial feasibility report.

Brook further noted that if it eventually is decided to proceed with completion of the marina, it should be possible to secure a low-interest loan from the Department of Navigation and Ocean Development.

The acting director said the state agency has expressed interest in a study for joint improvement of the harbor.

Harry Dean, the parks and recreation department's landscape architect, reported to the commission that some changes will be made in the tentative master plan for creation of the Coyote Point Park before a general plan is finalized and submitted to the commission early next month.

One proposed change which drew some opposition from the commission was the proposal which would terminate the main entrance road from Bayshore Freeway, halting access to the marina berthing area by the route.

An alternate route would be provided to the area by an extension of Poplar Avenue through the PG&E easement.

Drug Chargesfor Coast Duo

A routine investigation led to the arrest last Tuesday of two persons in Pacifica on various narcotics charges.

Police booked Robert Foley, 24, of San Francisco, and Sandra Langley, 21, of Mississippi. The arrest was made at the Marine View Motel.

According to police, Detective Ray Manley and Fraud Investigator Bill Tasoya followed clues to the motel, where they found drugs and drug paraphernalia.

Foley was charged with receiving stolen property, forgery, possession of drugs for sale and several outstanding traffic warrants. Miss Langley was charged with receiving stolen property and possession of dangerous drugs for sale.

Apartment Complex Delayed

A hearing on a 38-unit apartment-duplex complex on an abandoned road bed of the old Junipero Serra Boulevard, was extended for two more weeks, at the San Bruno city council meeting, after almost two hours of argument.

The project, requested by Bob Berryman, former Consolidated Lands Co. partner, had been turned down by the planning commission, and Berryman was appealing the planners' action.

Councilmen Monday voted to refer the matter to the planning commission once more, for a report on several problems raised during the hearing — the problem of density, landscaping and traffic.

Berryman is seeking rezoning of the 1.82-acre site in order to build nine duplexes and two apartment houses. The site, along Cunningham Way is now zoned for neighborhood commercial and single family.

Councilman Tony Governale also asked that the planners consider the propriety of apartment houses in that neighborhood.

In other action, the council:

— Held over an application of Associated Cinema Inc. to operate El Camino Theater, pending a meeting this Thursday over protests of merchants to parking problems.

—Decided to continue further investigation of a proposal that San Bruno City Hall aides distribute food stamps.

U.S. Archives Center Set in San Bruno

Congressman Paul N. (Pete) McCloskey, Jr., R-Portola Valley, announced Wednesday the award of a bid totalling $3,060,000 by the General Services Administration to the Johnson and Mape Construction Company, Palo Alto, for the construction of a Federal Archives Center in San Bruno.

An extension of the National Archives in Washington, D.C., the center will be the only such facility in the Western United States and will contain documents dealing with Indian and Western history, evolution of law and administrative records of the government. The data will be available to government agencies and the public for research and education.

The new facility, to be located at the intersection of Interstate 186 and El Camino Real in San Bruno on property previously owned by the Navy, will replace the Federal Records Center at 100 Harrison Street, San Francisco. That building is being razed to make way for state highway construction on the Central Freeway.

The precast concrete structure, 200' by 300', will include a library, six offices, a reference area, and a reference processing area. The Archives Center will have 50 employees.

Crash Hurts Fireman

A Pacifica fireman sustained neck injuries last week when the car he was driving was struck from behind by another vehicle at a Pacifica intersection.

Leonel Meono, 36, was reported in good condition today at Mary's Help Hospital, Daly City. A passenger in Meono's car, Allen W. Halliday, 29, was released in good condition after examination for back and head injuries, hospital authorities said.

THAT'S ELEPHANT TRAINING — Only during a Girl Scout day camp with a captive audience such as this could the art of elephant hunting be so well enjoyed. The action is part of a costume program ending two weeks of day camp activities by the Daly City Girl Scout Association. The location Serra Park where there is a sweeping view of South San Francisco and San Bruno in the background. (Post Photo)

Badges Galore At Camp Cutter

Twenty-three boys from Troop 129, sponsored by Hope Lutheran Church, spent a week earlier this month at Camp Cutter, the Scout Reservation at Big Basin. Under the guidance of Scoutmaster Ken Molver, the boys were busy learning new skills and acquiring merit badges.

The rank of Star Scout will be awarded to Bob Little. Doug Barron will receive the rank of Life Scout.

The Cooking Merit Badge was earned by the following boys: Dave Busenbark, Marty Feil, Frank Bologna, Bob Little, Don Melius, Corey Quigley and Guy Smith.

Also completing the requirements for the Camping Merit Badge were: Doug Barron, Bob Little and Don Melius.

With the emphasis on ecology and the preservation of the environment, the boys helped to clear underbrush, chip logs and create a firebreak. Bob Little successfully completed the requirements for Conservation of Natural Resources and Don Melius will receive the merit badge for Conservation of Soil and Water.

The Mile Swim was completed by Frank Bologna, Paul Cologna, Marty Feil, Bob Little, Sean Cunningham, Corey Quigley and Mark Tanner.

Although the boys were busy working towards advancement and merit badge requirements, they still had plenty of time for play. The campfires with group singing and the presentation of skits were highlights of the week.

Arabians Featured In Show

The grace and sensitive beauty of the Arabian stallion will be featured at the Arabian Horse Division of the 1971 Grand National Horse Show, October 22-31, at Daly City's Cow Palace.

The Arabian Horse Division, one of several in the full-classification horse show, is divided into classes: Western Pleasure Horses, English Pleasure Horses, Harness Horses, Park Horses, Native Costume and Side Saddles. Judging for all classes will be held October 29 and 30.

The breeding section of the Arabian Horse Division will judge stallions and mares on October 29, including yearlings, two-to-five-year-olds and older, plus champion and reserve stallions and mares.

Closing date for entries is September 24.

The Horse Show is one feature of the 10-day Grand National event, which will also include a livestock exposition, and rodeo, with the Royal Canadian Mounted Police, cowboys, rodeo queens and clowns.

Financing Proposals Are Mulled

The San Mateo County Parks and Recreation Commission is requesting an opinion from District Attorney Keith C. Sorenson concerning alternate financing proposals for the proposed $40 million first phase of the park and open space acquisitions recommended by the Regional Planning Committee.

Sorenson has been requested to submit his opinion as soon as possible in order that the commission can review it at a special meeting and submit its recommendations to the Board of Supervisors by August 24 when the board will decide whteher or not to include a portion of San Mateo County in the proposed Mid-Peninsula Regional Park.

The commission is opposed to the inclusion because it is concerned that it will dim chances for passage of a county-wide bond measure for park and open space acquisition and development.

At the suggestion of Commissioner Herbert G. Petersen, the commission decided Wednesday to request an opinion from Sorenson as to the legality of creating a county-wide general improvement district for the park and open space needs.

Petersen said it might be possible through a general improvement district procedure to pass a bond measure by a simple majority vote rather than by a two-third majority as ordinarily would be the case.

Sorenson also is being asked to determine if a simple yes or no ballot measure could be submitted to voters seeking permission to levy a specified tax for park and open space acquisition and development, and as to whether such a levy, if authorized, would be binding on future boards of supervisors.

Part-Time Sailor Promoted

Naval Reserve Commander Kenneth D. Moore of Pacifica recently assumed command of Naval Reserve Military Sealift Command Division 12-2 at Treasure Island, San Francisco.

Commander Moore entered the Naval Reserves upon direct commission after receiving his merchant marine license in 1954. He graduated from the California Maritime Academy and American Institute for Foreign Trade.

He saw active duty service as navigation officer aboard the supply ship USS Caliente from 1954 to 1956, for which he earned the China Service Medal.

During his 17 year career, Commander Moore has been affiliated with a number of Naval Reserve units. He served as navigator of the reserve crew aboard the destroyer USS Woodson, based at New Orleans, from 1958 to 1959.

In 1959 he served as administrative officer for reserve Military Sealift Command (MSTS) in Galveston, Texas. The two commands he served prior to his present duty were as boarding officer for MSTS Division 12-1 and executive officer for MSTS Division 12-3, both based at Treasure Island.

In civilian life Commander Moore is owner and chief marine surveyor of the K. D. Moore Associates marine surveying company.

Commander Moore is married to the former Wilma Gustinich of Livermore. He and his wife have six children and live at 1146 Banyan Way, Pacifica.

Mail's Quotable Quotes

Public relations man Walter Mails, who once almost single-handedly pitched Cleveland to a pennant, was, as usual, in the press box issuing quotable quotes ("There's more talent around than ever before, and fewer prospects"); crooner Bing Crosby, who once almost single-handedly sold nearly all the frozen orange juice in the country, was, as usual, sitting in a box seat behind home plate under the "KSFO" sign, going blissfully either unrecognized or unheeded; National League President Chub Feeney, who was once vice president of the San Francisco Giants and almost single-handedly ran the front office, was, as usual, in the radio booth, smoking a large cigar and matching wits with broadcaster Lon Simmons; and all was right with the world.

Meanwhile, down among the milieu, Captain Jean Wiitala, who was once a private in the army of Candlestick Park usherettes and who now almost single-handedly directs action in the lower right field section, was, as usual, surveying the filling stands behind sun glasses while standing casually in her custom styled Roos-Atkins uniform — which was not on semi-annual sale that day.

"Things are different this year," she said softly, which in a packed stadium is a demure, grandmotherly hollar.

"And it's not just the Giants winning the pennant and the stands selling out again. It's the fans. The young people are coming back. They empathize with all the rookies the Giants have brought up this year. And the long hairs. I've never seen so many of them."

And with what do the hip types empathize? Not the newly installed synthetic grass, for certain.

But then we are assuming that long hair and colorful garb make a hippie, and perhaps there is some confusion, here, between a fashion and a philosophy.

If genuine hippies really do like baseball, however, it makes sense — at least more sense than their liking football or the roller derby. The genuine hippie abhors violence, but might easily embrace the leisure and mental gymnastics inherent in baseball.

But whether they are hippies or not, youth does fill the stands at Candlestick these days as it hasn't in years. Youth and-or honest-to-goodness fans. The socialites who flashed themselves so often in earlier years have become relatively rare, says Mrs. Wiitala. Almost every one of the other nine usherettes we recently interviewed concurred.

Usherettes at Candlestick have other characteristics in common other than their observations. Every one is a fan, and almost every one has or had some other connection with baseball.

Barbara Dickey, for instance, is married to Lloyd Dickey, who was an outstanding southpaw hurler for the Seals and Padres in the Pacific Coast League. She is in charge of keeping curious people out of the pressbox.

Head usherette Adelaide Fischer, who directs 40 full-time usherettes (an extra 45 on weekend and holiday dates), is in a slightly different category. She started out as merely a fan, going to all the Seals' Sunday home games. With three small children, she was looking for a part-time job, and seventeen years ago she decided to combine her passion with her need. She applied for an usherette job and, obviously, got it.

She's never regretted it, and has had few problems over the years except from ticket duplications, fostered not by forgeries, but by a ticket agency, which, it seems, sometimes has two left computers. There was once a forged letter which was supposed to be from Giant business manager Jerry Donovan, introducing a group of people to Mrs. Fischer, who was to give them "the best seats in the house." The forgery was good, but the approach clumsy, and it didn't work.

Captain Lila Mears (there are four captains, two for the top deck, two for the bottom) is from Florida and has always loved baseball. She does a lot of running around that top deck, but refuses to complain.

"They have many more problems downstairs than we have up here." she says. "There are more seats, more problems with foul balls, VIP's, people trying to sneak in from the reserves, and so forth."

Barbara Canizzo, the other captain in the upper deck, agrees, but says that what the upper deck lacks in excitement, it makes up for in a sort of innocent intrigue.

"The people up here are riendly," says Mrs. Canizzo, whose husband, Tony, put in several years in the minors. "I've made many friends in the 16 years I've worked here and at Seals Stadium, most of them in the upper deck. Some usherettes have become more than just friends with customers."

(Mrs. Canizzo doesn't exaggerate, except that it maybe doesn't all happen on the upper deck. We double-checked and discovered that several marriages have resulted from casual acquaintanceships between usherettes and customers — both upper and lower deck — the most prominent of which was the one of Pete Stoneham, son of owner Horace Stoneham, who met his wife while she was in uniform. Of course, Pete can't exactly be called a customer, but a fan, yes.)

Another friendly upper deck denizen is Mrs. Lena Pera Giannini, who got her job 10 years ago through her daughter, Barbara, who had been an usherette. Mrs. Giannini's late first husband, Cookie, played professional baseball, as did her son, Dick.

Mrs. Giannini, who is called "Ma" by usherettes and customers alike (she claims she's the oldest usherette in the stadium and proud of it — except she won't tell her age), wouldn't trade her job for any other. "I'd work for nothing — but don't you print that!" She has never worked any place in the park except section 3 in the upper deck, and avoids problems with customers by making them friends. As fate would have it, as she says that, a gray haired man walks by, gives her a hug, and moves on to his seat.

Sally Jarvis, whose daughter is an usherette and who has rooted for the Giants since their Mel Ott era, is in her seventh year as a downstairs usherette, and agrees with the ladies upstairs. It's a little tougher downstairs, especially in her section around the Giant dugout, which is prone to autograph seekers, foul balls, and VIP boxes.

All usherettes are required to check immediately for injuries on foul balls. The responsibility becomes graver when one has in one's section the box of Mrs. Horace Stoneham.

Jean Marsiglia, who works the third base side of the lower stands, broke in as an usherette at the 1961 All-Star game and calls that her greatest thrill. Her oldest daughter started at Seals Stadium when she was 17, and worked her way through San Francisco State College (she was a Jefferson High grad) as an usherette. Mrs. Marsiglia's father, Bert Davidson, was a baseball manager in Canada in the early '30s.

While she concedes the lower stands to be a little rougher to handle than the uppers, she says she's never run across a problem that a little sweet talk couldn't solve. She, like all the other usherettes, agrees that, while baseball fans are usually good natured and relative teetotalers, they do tend to be nicer when the Giants win. As for the characters, the exhibitionists, "We all just ignore them, unless they're really annoying other customers, and they usually go away."

Chris Picchi, a 19-year-old (soon to be 20) College of San Mateo student, recalls that when she was a little girl going to games with her parents, she would point at the ladies in their uniforms and say, "That's what I'm going to be when I grow up." She fulfilled her wish when she turned 16, the minimum hiring age for a Candlestick usherette.

"Some day," she says, "I'm going to write a book about my experiences here." She won't give away any anecdotes, but promises it won't be a Jim Bouton type book. "It will be about the funny little things that happen every day, the characters you meet."

Zelma Rivera may have the most interesting usherette job. She is in charge of the mezzanine boxes and serves the press and the VIPs. She's met all the San Francisco mayors since Candlestick opened, Chief Justice Earl Warren, Frank Sinatra, Bing Crosby, Danny Kaye, Mamie Van Doren, Doris Day, Joe E. Brown, and, of course, just about every baseball luminary worth knowing, including Joe DiMaggio.

"I'll never forget one night when Joe was here. He started to leave a little early and I said to him, what's the rush, and he said he was on his way to L.A.

"I remember imagining at the time that he was going to visit Marilyn. I think he was really, truly, deeply in love with her. The poor guy didn't know it then, but that was the night she died."

Joe E. Brown, she says, was always gracious, always willing to sign autographs and clown for the people. Doris Day was really like the girl next door, and Mamie Van Doren was like her image, too.

One night there was almost a riot over Mamie, who showed up wearing a gown with a neckline almost down to the field. 'People were gathering around to get a look at her outfit, and blocking the view of even more people who were more interested in the game, so we finally had to get the Burns men to escort her out of the park because she was on the verge of starting fist fights between men who wanted to watch her and men who wanted to watch the game."

Was poor Mamie upset over missing the game?

'She loved every minute of it."

Frank Sinatra, like Crosby, enjoys privacy, but Dany Kaye always used to come in disguises so people wouldn't recognize him, and then be disappointed if nobody paid any attention to him.

But Zelma Rivera always paid attention to him, in the true spirit of Candlestick Park usherettes.

FRISBEE CHAMPS — There's apparently no single qualification that makes for a Frisbee champion. They're all sizes, ages and sexes even. Standing from left are Tim Diggins, who took a third place, then first place winners Patrice Bender, Donald McCrum and Dick Galliani, and Guy Smith, who also won a third place slot. Front row are the second place winners, from left, Nancy Nolan, Paul Richards and Jim Arrowood. (See story page 19). (Post Photo)

SOUTH SAN FRANCISCO'S Orange Memorial Park was the scene Thursday of a summer festival of happenings. The youngsters on the left are shown competing in a foot race. The young fellow on the right, Wesley Metheney, is participating in a greased pole climb. The day-long series of events was a product of the city's Recreation Department. It was intended to display some of the department's activities.

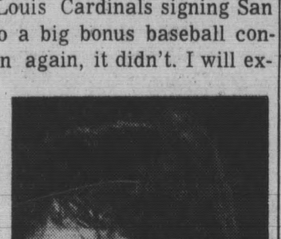
Development Is Strange

THERE WAS THIS story in the sports section the other day about the St. Louis Cardinals signing San Bruno's Keith Hernandez to a big bonus baseball contract. It figured. And then again, it didn't. I will explain.



Keith Hernandez

First, the bonus was estimated at $50,000. That estimate was based on (a) the fact that Hernandez had turned down a reported $40,000 bonus offer earlier this summer and (b) when he signed with the Cardinals he gave up a full free ride at the University of California. That has to be worth, say $20,000 (the cost of education), not to mention the sheepskin that goes with it. Or, as his father, John, put it, the bonus was too big to turn down. So much for elementary economics.

You must also understand that Hernandez is some pumpkins of a baseball player. He is a pitcher as well as a slick fielding first baseman, but pitching is not his forte. "He could play first base for a pro club right now," said Bob Roselli. Roselli is a former big league catcher (Chicago White Sox, I think) and manager of the San Mateo entry in the Mid-Peninsula Joe DiMaggio (baseball) League. He saw enough of Hernandez, who played for the MPJDL Millbrae team. "He is by far the best prospect around," said Roselli.

As a hitter, nobody, but nobody, in his high school league or in the MPJDL came close to Hernandez. They say he is a better sticker than his brother Gary. And that's something. Gary, who played for Cal last year and will again this year, won the Pacific Eight Conference batting championship by such a wide margin last season they were thinking about giving him a saliva test.

So the bonus figured. What didn't figure was this. Hernandez was the 42nd player selected by the Cardinals in the last free agent draft. And he was the 783rd player chosen by the major league clubs participating in the draft.

WILLIE MAYS DIDN'T play Tuesday night when the Giants opened a two-game series against Montreal in Candlestick Park. He also sat out Wednesday's game, except for a pinch hitting appearance.

You have to be over 40 to appreciate why Mays needs his rest. I mean, it hurts. How Mays is able to play this game once a week amazes me more than the feats of George Blanda and Sam Snead. And they are something else.

What is more amazing is that Mays would play in an exhibition game on a day off, as he did in Minneapolis last Monday. He played six innings and five different positions. He also participated in a pre-game home run hitting contest against Harmon Killebrew of the Twins.

If that appearance was more important than the National League pennant race, I will apologize for being so dumb.

The Ladies' Slo-Pitch All Stars, sponsored by the Daly City Recreation Department, squeezed out the Hayward League Champions in a post season game at Westlake Park last Sunday.

The combined pitching of Linda Torres and Marilyn Tatos carried the All Stars to a 13-8 win. Nine of the thirteen runs were driven in by Ruth Stege, Jo Ann Stamps, and Kathy McBride.

An exhibition game square off the Daly City Toyota Tigers against the San Leandro Half Way Club which ended in a 4-4 tie. After eight full innings of play, the game was called because of time. The Tigers took an early lead with a grand slam by Sherry Garner but were unable to hold the Half Way Club.

The Casualiers Teen Club, coached by John Jarvis, downed the Daly City All-Stars with a final score of 27-13.

In early competition, the teens defeated four other junior teen clubs to win the Annual Team Trophy.

A Fall Women's League will get under way the latter part of August. Interested teams should contact the Daly City Recreation Division for further information.

South City Golfer Wins NCGA Junior

Mark Hillsinger, a junior at South San Francisco High School, is the new Northern California Golf Association Junior champion.

Hillsinger beat Paul Kolbus, a junior at Monte Vista High School in Alamo, 2-1, to capture the title at the Lake Merced Country Club yesterday.

Hillsinger was 12 over par and Kolbus was 14 over in the 36-hole title match. Kolbus, who was four down after the twenty-seventh hole, made it one down after the thirty-third hole. But his tee shot on the sixteenth hole went into the trees, and he took a double bogey on the hole.

Frisbees Keep the Playgrounds Active

Jefferson School

What's been going on at Jefferson Elementary School? A carnival of games. For two days children participated in competitive games and relay races.

The first contest was the Straw Toss won by Glenn Kinard, 9, who threw the straw 13 feet. Second place winner was Carmen Sanchez, 8, who threw the straw 11½ feet.

Third place winners were Janice McDonald, 9, and Ken Kinard, 5. Both threw 10 feet.

The second event was the Balloon Popping Contest, won by Dorian Garibaldi, 11, Corey Franklin, 9, and Barry Franklin, 13. The third event was a series of Relay Races. The first race was running. The contestants ran in groups according to the age level.

Group 1 (9-11) winner was Dorian Garibaldi, 11. Group 2 (8-9) winner was Carmen Sanchez, 8. Group 3 (9) winner was Glenn Kinard, 9. Group 4 (7) winner was Terry Dentoni, 7, and Group 5 (5-7) winner was Michael Franklin, 7.

The second race was the Hopping Contest. The winners to the age group 1, boys' division were: First, Michael Franklin, 7, second, Corey Franklin, third, Kenneth Pizzi.

The winners of group 2 were, first, Carmen Sanchez, 8, second, Leslie McDonald, 8, third, Janice McDonald, 9.

The last event, and the most popular, was the Egg Toss Contest. The winners were Alicia Smith, Carla Smith and Lisa Goodman.

Northridge Park

Last week at Northridge Park was highlighted by the discovery of a frisbee thrower who could toss the frisbee more than 150 feet.

Closeness to the ocean and its powerful winds also revealed a frisbee can be thrown west and be caught in draft that carries it high in the opposite direction! The fun came to an abrupt halt when too many frisbees became lost.

Weekly carroms tournament resulted in a young girl defeating all the boys in the "unlimited" division. Dian Nelson defeated ex-champion John Neligan for the title. In the opening bracket, Pat Neligan defeated Jim Neligan, John Neligan over Tracey Williams, Diane Nelson over Lisa Williams, and David Alas over Richard Wooldridge.

Another bar-b-que is planned for Wednesday.

Olympia

The highlight of the activities at Olympia Playground last week was the big Indian Day Thursday. The little squaws and big chiefs at the playground turned out for the big pow-wow. Indian beads and headdresses were made which looked quite authentic.

This week Olympia regulars will begin constructing the float that will be shown at the parade Thursday.

Our Lady of Mercy

Our Lady of Mercy conducted a bar-b-que and a baking contest last week.

Janet Valestrino placed first for best looking dessert. Diane Valestrico and Chris Parese placed second for best tasting. Renne Garry and Kathy Cunnie were third for most original and most work. Mark Pappas was fourth for most filling. This week work will progress for presentation of "How the West Was Fun."

Palisades Park

Having won many bicycle races at Palisades Park, Glen Coddington returned this past week to win the first Palisade's down-hill slalom race. Glen was followed by Joey Matekel and Lance Matekel.

Entertainment was provided last Friday by Anita Jones and three selections from the Jackson-Five.

Everyone at Palisades, is getting "turned-on" to Daly City's "How the West Was Fun." For the remainder of the summer effort will be directed to building covered wagons and horse costumes.

In addition, Palisade's strong desire to win will result in the pet jumping frog receiving intensive training in both theory and practice.

Panorama

A little man basketball tournament was held for sixth graders at Panorama School last week. Jim Galleger and Frank Barnes came from behind to upset the team of Doug McClusky and Pat Farmer, 24-22, to take the championship. Also playing extremely well were Bob Gradwhol, Robert Jefferson, Tim Farmer and Bart Howard.

George Sofos was the winner of carroms tournament last week, taking a two-out-of-three championship match.

Recreation activities, conducted by Linda Thompson at Vista Grande playgound include Cracker Whistle Races Tuesday.

Thursday will be Pantomime Theatre Day. Everyone will be able to pantomime a skit of their choice. There will be singing and playing of instruments on Friday.

Last week a Popcorn Fiesta was held. Enjoying the popcorn were Steve Murray, Rick Perez, Andrew Wetherbee, Una Simmers, Victa Simmers, Ron Tomasello, Elizabeth Carraza, Allan Rouge and Ken Rizzato.

Friday afternoon a baseball game was held. Participants were Tom Ferrari, Rick Perez, Charlie Stafford, Bob Ferrari, Gary Groufer, Hugh Loveless, John Wetherbee, Keith Jacobs, Elliot Riviera, Steve Giovanetti and Ron Tomasello. Recreation activities are sponsored by the Daly City Recreation Division.

Table Tennis Tournament

The Serramonte Gym was the site for three championship table tennis matches, sponsored by the Daly City Recreation Division.

In the C group Rob Ruzich was the winner over Karl Amaral, 21-14 and 21-18. The C consolation round was won by Rob's brother, Randy Ruzich. He defeated Jim Morton in two rounds.

The B group was won by Mike Macia, 21-18, 17-21 and 21-16 over Ricky Ryan. It was one of the toughest championship matches. Jun Takao won the B group consolation round over Mike Zawalski. Rupert Medina, after winning three early rounds, took on Chuck Smith for the A group crown. The first game was a 21-9 for Rupert.

BRIGHT LIGHTS BY LLOYD JOHNSON

Scotty Campbell's Smart Restaurant Rendezvous

There are many reasons in addition to the fine food why Scotty Campbell's in Redwood City is regarded as one of the Bay Area's leading restaurants. To the sophisticate, it is a smart rendezvous; to the traveller, it is an oasis; to the lover of fine artifacts it is an extension of an antique show. As a prelude to the main course, which could be anything from Beef Brochette, Flambe to Scampi-Deep Water Shrimp, there is flavorful onion soup or crisp, tossed green salad (choice of Vinaigrette, French or Bleu Cheese dressing). All entrees are served with hot garlic bread, stuffed or baked potato with sour cream and chives. And if you can still think about dessert, try their Maerd Eip (a special cheese cake served with brandied cherries) . . . Small, medium or large—the pizzas prepared by Enrico Romano rank among the very best anywhere in the Bay Area, and that includes points as far away as Berkeley and Santa Clara. As owner and operator of Romano's Italian restaurant at Rockaway Beach, Pacifica, Romano takes great personal pride in the way he prepares these delicacies. Drop in and find out what we mean.

THREE'S COMPANY, a versatile trio of show business veterans, provide the Tuesday-through- Saturday dance sounds in Hugo's Bistro at Hyatt House Burlingame. They fire away with neat instrumentals and display excellent personalities to draw all age groups.

European Atmosphere, Fine Wines

The precept of a fine restaurant — good food, well served in a congenial atmosphere, is found at The Matterhorn, a European restaurant located on Broadway near California in Burlingame. Owner-chef Wilfried Blarer had a food, hotel and restaurant background on the Continent before coming to the Bay Area. Many of the best foreign vintages as well as bottlings from California's top vintners are stocked here . . . In addition to an array of seafood appetizers, cocktails, soups, large salads and sandwiches, the menu at Vince's Italian and Sea Food restaurant suggests such dishes as Veal Parmigiana and Chicken Cacciatore. Many guests prefer steaks — thick cuts of top sirloin, New York or Minute Steak Bordelaise — and you better believe that Vince's serves the best (Owner Vince Licata purchased a grand champion steer and lamb at the recent San Mateo County Fair's livestock auction). Roast Chicken and Polenta is a Sunday Special. Complement your meal with a fine wine . . . Hearty appetites are appeased at The Franciscan restaurant, Pier 43½ at Fisherman's Wharf, by the efforts of a well-appointed staff headed up by General Manager George Skaff and his son, Richard, Assistant Manager. The dining area and lounge present a parti-colored setting from which to view the incoming and outgoing ocean vessels as they slink by the restaurant.

Moonraker's Second-Level Dining

From the second-level dining room or lounge of The Moonraker, a beautiful restaurant located along the shoreline of Pacifica at Rockaway Beach, one may watch the passage of ocean-going vessels and the continuous roll of waves (the surf is illuminated at night) while feasting luxuriously on Continental fare. The dinner menu is highlighted by such dishes as Filet of Sole Bonne Femme (poached filets in white wine and finished in the classic sauce) and Veal Sweetbreads Mascotte (jumbo veal sweetbreads prepared in a fine sauce with tiny whole onions, mushrooms and artichoke bottoms) . . . The same nautical view may be enjoyed while partaking of authentic Mexican dishes served by flashing-eyed senoritas in the colorful Papagayo Room, situated on the level below. Take advantage of the coupon offer now appearing in Nick Gust's advertisement — it's good through August 29 . . . Don Loya is the genial new mixologist at Lew Lehr's Steak House, in San Francisco's Marina district. Don is as long on ambition as he is on talent: he spends his days attending the highly rated Hotel and Restaurant Management course at San Francisco State College.

A. Sabella's Luxury Restaurant

Hospitable facilities and fine food are the ample reward for dining at A. Sabella's, Fisherman's Wharf. The luxury restaurant, which is comfortably air-conditioned, serves generous portions, with prices ranging from extremely moderate to slightly expensive. And there are many elaborate entrees to tempt you, such as Baked Sea Bass Alla Filippo (baked in sour cream sherry wine topped with Parmesan cheese) and Lobster Thermidor with mushrooms, Parmesan cheese and shoestring potatoes. Diners come here from all around the world . . . A spacious and newly decorated ballroom provides a perfect facility for banquets, receptions, business and social functions at the San Franciscan Hotel, a PSA hotel located at Civic Center in San Francisco. For entertaining in grand style (up to 600 persons can be accommodated for dinner), phone 626-8000 for particulars and reservations . . . A complete menu covers breakfast, lunch, dinner and snacks, spotlighting juicy spareribs, sizzling steaks, prime meats and fowl, at Stickney's restuarants. You may also order Stickney's pastries, pure whipped cream pies and cakes, which are from Adrian "Red" Stickney's retail bakery, to eat here or take along.

Enjoy Hoberg's Resort For Final Vacation Days

Vacationists from the entire Northern California area are flocking to Hoberg's Resort in Lake County. The reason? This is the last year of Hoberg's operation as a summer resort, and many special events have been scheduled throughout August just prior to the smash Labor Day Holiday. The perennial Ozzie keeps things buzzing day and night slanted toward the memories and nostalgia so closely associated with this great mountain spa dating back to 1885 . . . The New Establishment, six young talents whose song repertoire includes everything from pop, rock, folk-rock and country-western numbers, are appearing in the Jesters Court of Kings Castle, North Lake Tahoe, through August 31, alternating with the highly acclaimed nude musical revue "Love In." Joan Rivers and Lou Rawls appear in two shows nightly in the Camelot Theater of Kings Castle, through August 25 . . . Folk-rock star Stephen Stills will introduce his new five-piece band in two shows at the Berkeley Community Theater, Friday and Saturday, August 20 and 21. Also appearing will be Atlantic's famed brass group, The Memphis Horns.

Last Call For The After Glow

Only one more week to catch the musicianship of After Glow, the band now playing at The Putter, Burlingame Plaza. Because of prior bookings, the group was only signed for a two-week gig. But you can bet they will soon be inked to a lengthy return engagement . . . Frank and Fannie Torres continue to offer their mouth-watering South American delicacies at Torres Beach restaurant, located just south of Devil's Slide on Coast Highway One in Montara. These long-term coastside inhabitants have, over the years, earned one of the most far-reaching reputations as purveyors of delicious, unforgettable food . . . The Sound Barrier, a group with a "right on" sound which entertained at Deejay's in Belmont, will take off a couple of weeks for vacationing. Replacing the popular group Wednesday night is Fog . . . Bud Nelton, well-known Peninsula plankman, is now blending the libations on Friday nights at Russo's in San Bruno. No stranger to the Millbrae-San Bruno area, Bud minded the plank at King's Bowl for three years and seven years at Ken's House of Pancakes (his replacement was Kathy, the first lady bartender on the Peninsula).

Holiday Inn Belmont Attraction

Singer Jerry Dyke, currently appearing in the Red Fox Lounge at the Holiday Inn in Belmont, has developed into one of the major entertainment attractions in the Bay Area. Jerry, who sings and plays piano and guitar, is backed by Dave Newman and Don Stewart . . . You'll always find at least five hot entrees daily at King's Table, a Redwood City haven for buffet-style dining. Now featuring prime rib or steak at dinner time, the "all you can eat" dinner price is an unbelievable $2.10. An array of tempting desserts is also included. Refreshing cocktails are served in the cozy lounge. . . . The El Patio in San Carlos is now featuring a "2 for 1" luncheon offer. Clip the coupon appearing in The Times on Wednesday and present it to your waitress. When buying one lunch, your guest's lunch is free. This offer is valid through September 20 . . . Brunch (served from 10 a.m. to 3 p.m.) is a happening every Sunday at Charley Brown's in Redwood City. Bloody Marys and fizzes are also available in the lounge. Located at the Municipal Marina, Charley Brown's is a twin to the one in Burlingame.

Park Avenue Tours' Busy Season

What with summer weather now in its glory, this is the busiest time of the year for the Bay Area's four Park Avenue Tours locations. It seems everyone is heading for the Lake Tahoe territory, and the easiest way (and, cheapest) to go is through one of Park Avenue Tours' offices. Also available are package trips to Reno and Las Vegas. Act now . . . Recent ringsiders at Finocchio's were comedian Red Skelton and his lovely wife. Fans were not only treated to the colorful revue of famous female impersonators but got to see some of Skelton's antics as he clowned from his chair with Emcee Carroll Wallace. Following the "Hello, Dolly" finale, Skelton went backstage to visit the performers, and later signed autographs in the lobby for scores of admirers. . . . Phil Lehr's finest gourmet creation to date — Veal Armanino — is now being featured in the elegant Wellington Room of The Steakery, in downtown San Francisco. Seasoned with Armanino shallots and spices, the veal is cooked and flamed by the waiter at your table.

Now Try Chicken 'n Dumplings

Such southern specialties as fried chicken and chicken 'n dumplings are featured at the New Southern restaurant, South San Francisco. Operated by Reno and Julio Donati and Nick Sbarra, this outstanding restaurant has been a haven for southern-style food since 1937. Also available are superb Continental specialties, such as Scallopine of Veal a la Villa Royal and Medallion Beef. Live entertainment, featuring Dave Little at the Lowrey organ, is offered in the lounge Friday and Saturday nights. As everyone knows, the Villa Hotel in San Mateo is a major convention facility. One of the many groups booked this month is the Portuguese Protective Union, State of California. Over 250 persons will attend the gathering August 21 through 25 . . . The Band Stand in Redwood City will be open seven nights a week throughout the summer months, offering entertainment and dancing. Free spaghetti feeds on Wednesday nights; minors are always welcome. After-hours entertainment on Friday and Saturday, plus a complete breakfast menu.

Frank LaPierre

Post-Times Writer

Frank LaPierre's column will not be published this week. Instead, an editorial on a rapid transit link to San Francisco International Airport will be presented. Mr. LaPierre's column will return next week.)

Breakthrough For Peninsula Transit

Credit for the first real commitment of purpose in extension of the Bay Area Rapid Transit District into San Mateo County beyond its Daly City terminus must go to the San Francisco Airports Commission and its staff, headed by Director James K. Carr. It is contained in the Commission's decision to modify expansion plans for the San Francisco International Airport to accommodate a BARTD subway station and tunnel within the airport.

That unanimous decision brings with it the practicality of more than $2 million in planning costs and possibly as much as $6 millions in final costs but, in so doing, can avert added costs of $12.5 to $15 millions along with the enormous inconvenience of bringing the transit line to the airport after completion of its new component structures.

Thus, after years of haggling to no purpose, or at cross-purposes, a genuine breakthrough in a knotty impasse has been scored.

The paramount reason for the Airport's Commission decision, of course, is realization that the fate of the International Airport may hang upon its ready availability to passengers who might otherwise go to another airport having such availability. While the commission was concerned with the possible loss of San Francisco air traffic to Oakland, it should be noted that approximately 50 per cent of the passengers now using the airport come from south of it, specifically the Peninsula.

Extension of BARTD to the airport would involve a major penetration into San Mateo County since a "turnaround" and terminal facility would be needed and this, under tentative speculation, would be in the vicinity of Trousdale avenue close to the Burlingame-Millbrae boundary line. That is as far as the "airport access" planning was taken.

In light of the airport passenger potential, however, further BARTD expansion appears probable although BARTD officials, hampered by prior claims within their existent district, pending legislation, and other difficulties, are loath to discuss it. But there was no reticence on the part of a spokesman for the San Francisco Chamber of Commerce who said the rapid transit motto is "San Jose or Bust."

This, too, appeared to be implicit in the hopes of most of the ten several agencies making representations at the Airport's Commission meeting where the decision was reached. It is the sensible goal because it involves the creation of an effective and possibly self-sustaining transit line into the area of the greatest need.

The time may come when the airport access phase of that transit line is secondary, but for the present it is all-important. Whatever the outcome, San Mateo County owes thanks to the San Francisco Airport's Commission for its enterprise and the courage of its convictions by risking the costs involved. Thanks also are owed to the organizations, agencies and businesses in both San Francisco and San Mateo Counties, that supported the action.

S.M. Priest Tells of Life Behind Bars

By VERN KROGH

Prisoner No. 74970 was released from the felony section of the county jail in Redwood City last Friday.

Two days ago he was booked as William Flegge, 41, wanted by Los Angeles police department on credit card charges.

And that is who he was to both the jailors and the inmates of the jail until this morning.

After he walked out of the jail in the custody of Lieut. William Moran, commander of the county jail, — still in his jail denims — the prisoner's real identity was disclosed.

He is Father William Flegge, a Catholic priest on leave from Salt Lake City, who since June has been executive director of the San Mateo County Service League.

Father Flegge, who still asks to be called plain "Bill Flegge," told of an entirely different subculture that exists in the jail.

"Bill" spent two nights in a felony section of the jail which housed 12 prisoners awaiting trial.

"It is a food oriented society," Bill told a group of reporters. "The prisoners barter food with each other. When I left this morning one guy came up and wanted to make a trade. I gave him my eggs, because I knew I could get breakfast on the outside."

The jail food, Bill said, was "satisfactory."

"These guys really stick together," he said. "When one guy snitches, he becomes public enemy number one."

Last night, the on-leave priest said, because one inmate was suspected of squealing on another, supper was served to individual cells. Normally, the inmates eat together.

But to protect the suspected "squealer" the inmates were kept apart.

The greatest need, Father Flegge said, is to find something constructive for the prisoners to do.

But this is especially difficult because the felony prisoners are in the county jail for only a limited time.

"You just can't let everyone wander around," he conceded, pointing out there is only a limited number of television sets.

While serving his time in stir, Bill said he read a mystery novel, the title of which he couldn't recall this morning.

The priest first became interested in the plight of prisoners while serving as chaplain in the state prison of Utah and in the city and county jail in Salt Lake City.

Asked to be relieved of his duties as a priest, Father Flegge came to San Mateo County, as he had attended a seminar at St. Patrick's Seminary in Menlo Park and had become interested in this area of the country.

Then, he said, he met Sheriff Earl B. Whitmore, and was impressed with "his openness."

"There is a real human feeling in this county — a concern on the part of the people in authority about the whole correctional problem," he said. "They have an openness to constructive changes."

So arrangements were made to book him into the county jail.

He was booked in the part of the jail known as "The Penthouse," the area where the roughest prisoners are kept.

"I'll never come back to a place like this," he told one fellow inmate.

"That's what they all say," was the reply he received.

Father Flegge lives as a private citizen in San Mateo, but has his headquarters at 678 North Main Street, Redwood City.

He said he found that the prisoners were not aware of the program of the County's Service League, an entirely volunteer and privately financed program.

Members of the Women's Auxiliary now visit the jail twice a week to offer any help they can to inmates. They contact their wives and families if asked to do so.

An educational program is being developed for the women's section of the jail, he reported, and a part time social worker is available to consult not only with inmates but with prisoners as well.

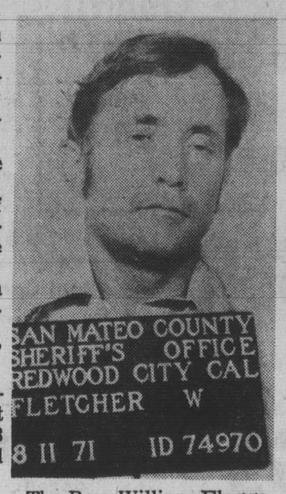
Flegge said there is a need for development of a constructive program, but as yet it is not quite what it should be.

"There are a number of things to be done, but we must develop them step by step."

"I was there to make suggestions, not to evaluate," he said. "I saw nothing wrong with the treatment."

It was not only the inmate who did not know Father Flegge's true identity.

Only this morning, after his release from custody, was the jail staff informed who their prisoner really was.



The Rev. William Flegge

Letter To The Editor

Editor, The Post:

A great many people do not realize that one of our major problems is the present destruction by vandalism, bombing, fire, and theft to our schools, public buildings and homes. Everyone should be concerned because these destructive acts place a burden not only on the homeowner but also on every renter, because it raises the insurance rates as well as raising taxes.

In addition, it is becoming more difficult to place the insurance although rates have risen from 25 percent to 50 percent. This means that everyone is required to absorb the losses either by taxes or a raise in rentals.

Besides the fact that insurance rates are high because of the high percentage of loss on public buildings, companies have selected areas where insurance has become almost impossible to place. When it is possible to insure in these areas, a large deductible per occurrence is placed on the insurance. This also causes the taxing agency's budget to rise, because of the necessity to replace or repair the damaged buildings. In our county alone, this is representing millions of dollars each year.

Perhaps it would be beneficial for parents to talk to their youngsters and elaborate on the seriousness of the abovementioned acts and the fact that they are not only destroying property but also indirectly causing a loss of money to their own families.

Although we burden schools each year with additional courses they must teach, I would hope that the schools also would continually point out the consequences of actions such as described above. Our schools and other public buildings have been built with the expenditure of millions of dollars, and all of us should be encouraged to help keep them up, not break them up.

How S.S.F. Tackled Its City Budget

By BOB PETERSON

Budget sessions are notoriously boring.

Maybe because there's too much talk of dollars, and too little thought given to how budgets affect the individual.

Of course, plain old money isn't bad if you can find thousands of the over-looked greenbacks somewhere in the books.

That's what happened in the case of the South San Francisco city budget.

City Manager Gale Dreisbach said that while putting the budget together Louise Coleman, an employe in his office, noticed that $97,000 earmarked for the parking district fund has been drawing interest in the general fund.

Dreisbach put City Attorney John Noonan to work to see if the money can't remain in the general fund. It could be used to meet salary and fringe benefit demands. The city has yet to settle with its employes.

Such is not the case with most cities, school boards, and special district budgets. It is more frequently a constant payout, many times, the proverbial out of Paul's pocket to pay Peter.

South San Francisco is playing the austerity game with the rest. Councilmen there set the same tax rate as last year (91 cents) before even knowing what the final assessment was or how negotiations with employes will end. Hiring has been frozen in the building and engineering departments.

However in the name of efficiency three positions were approved in the city manager's office and a new deputy city attorney was authorized.

Meanwhile, the position of landscape specialist is being scrutinized with a careful eye.

Dreisbach said he has been questioning the validity of the lone position, one that was created when the common green developments sprouted in Westborough.

The position likely will be moved under the wing of the ment.

What does all this mean?

In the case of South San Francisco, it means that the city is beginning to experience the implementation of the business-like philosophies of a new city manager.

Dreisbach has also received approval to possibly place the position of Marina Superintendent into the Park and Recreation sphere.

Overtime records are now being kept of the police department to determine if it might not be cheaper to either set up a different arrangement or hire additional personnel instead of paying exorbitant overtime monies.

Dreisbach said thge city is losing a lot of money also because the operations of the police department are not automated.

As another austerity move, Dreisbach said that next year he will be recommending that the fleet of city vehicles be converted to propane.

One police car (the first in the county) has been operating successfully on propane for some time now. Dreisbach said maintenance on the vehicle is practically nil.

Some other ways South San Francisco plans to save money is by bowing out of the Association of Bay Area Governments when dues expire next year; reducing the Chamber of Commerce budget request of $15,000 down to $12,500; and freezing $14,000 budgeted for the newly revamped convention bureau until it can be proven that organization will be beneficial.

There are bolder moves, too.

Dreisbach said he intends to look into the possibility of having the city become self-insured in some areas. The city now puts out $85,000 annually for insurance premiums.

Another seemingly radical move Dreisbach intends to investigate is going out to bid for city engineering work, instead of having the city engineering department do it.

Bad Civil Rights Record

The constitution of the State of California as completed in 1850 states, "All men are by nature free and independent and have certain inalienable rights, among which are those of enjoying and defending life and liberty; acquiring, possessing and protecting property; and pursuing and obtaining safety and happiness." Article 1, Section 1).

Sam Chandler

But history tells us that no more sorry record of uncivil treatment toward minority groups exists in the Union than in California. For evidence of this statement one can consult the history itself as it is recorded in "The Other Californians" by Professor Robert F. Heizer and Alan J. Almquist.

As they point out, "The early Spanish settlers of California regarded the Indians whom they found there as inferior beings whose souls needed saving no matter how high the cost of salvation in terms of broken bodies. The Spanish rulers and their successors so discriminated against the aboriginal inhabitants that within the span of twenty years, between 1850 and 1870, the Indian population of the state fell from 100,000 to approximately half that number as the result of disease, starvation and wholesale homicide."

With the passing of time and power, the Spanish in California became the victims of persecutions nearly as dreadful as they had heaped upon the Indians. Those who would not accept Mexican citizenship were driven from the province. The great chain of Spanish missions was wrested from the control of the Church and doled out to Mexican grandees. Meanwhile other public lands were passed out to governmental favorites who mistreated everyone who was not of the ruling click? Indian, Spanish, American.

Another power shift tumbled the Mexicans from perpetrators to victims of racial prejudice. Within a year after the United States won control of California, Mexican nationals were being driven before the white men because they were "an indolent, mixed race," unequal to "the old Saxon blood that must stride the continent, must command all of its northern shores, must press the grape and the olive, eat the orange and fig and in their own unaided might, erect the altar of civil and religious freedom on the plains of California."

There were seven Mexican-Americans in the State Constitutional Convention. Notwithstanding, within a decade the legislature passed the first of several "greaser" acts that persecuted Mexican miners for vagrancy, for gambling, for carrying arms, and these acts came when California was in the wild, wooly west stage of its development.

An incident cited by Professor Heizer and Mr. Almquist illustrates the suffering of Mexican-Americans. A man of this nationality was arrested for stealing two horses. "Give 'em a fair jury trial, and rope 'em up with the majesty of the law," someone shouted. So the "greaser" was brought to trial before a jury that declared him not builty. "You'll have to do better than that," the advocate said. "We hung him an hour ago." Later the horses he was supposed to have stolen were found where the owner had tied them.

In turn the Chinese, the Japanese, and the black man came to suffer the inequities that forever seemed reserved for non-white racial and ethnic groups in California.

Quoting Thoreau, the authors of "The Other Californians' write, "It is never too late to give up our prejudices. No way of thinking or doing, however ancient, can be trusted without proof. What everybody echoes or in silence passes by as true today may turn out to be a falsehood tomorrow. What old people say you cannot do, you can try, and find you can. Old deeds for old people, and new deeds for new."

"The Other Californians" is a record of acts of prejudice against non-Anglo ethnic groups, yet it should illustrate for all groups of men that old biases exist in all races in latent form and can be aroused to make some men suffer at the hands of others. The ideal for freedom and independence for all men means for all men.

Surely "The Other Californians" should be read by all Californians.

Numbers Cast Doubt on U.S. Figures

Jobs. Nothing so affects family life, the overall economy and the national psyche as jobs. While a dwindling portion of our total population remembers the dismal days of the 30's, circumstances of high unemployment are recognized as unacceptable by all. Furthermore, we should realize that as to the one man who is out of work and needs a job, unemployment is 100 percent, and devastating.

As jobs are so central to American life, unemployment dominates not only the economic but also the political scene. Before it, all other issues are dwarfed, and office-holders understand that their public life is dependent upon their success in providing a healthy and busy economy. They know well that "ins" suffer during periods of joblessness, and that they themselves may be forced to join the ranks of the unemployed.

In this day of instant information, the public is supplied a running account of unemployment. While a variety of detailed reports are available, the monthly estimate of the number of unemployed persons in the United States, published by the Bureau of Labor Statistics (BLS), attracts by far the greatest attention. This figure is released in the first week of each month for the preceding month and is based on door to door interviews at 50,000 homes.

Statistically speaking, the BLS method is sound. A 50,000 household count is massive by ordinary polling standards, and their methods have been refined through years of practice.

Nonetheless, polling techniques present problems. The interviewer is, as in all such matters, at the mercy of the person responding.

The definition of "unemployed" admits of the possibility of serious omissions. Selection of even so large a sample is a difficult business, and the changing habits of the public can seriously affect the validity of polling information.

The monthly reports of the BLS are accepted as authentic and as the figures twist, turn, plunge or rise, the popularity of public personalities follows in reactive patterns. Furthermore, a mystique has surrounded the BLS and its prestige, and the hubbub following dramatic change has never included substantial challenge of the Bureau and its work..

Such respect is well taken, for the quality of BLS performance is high, and its personnel professional. Nonetheless, the monthly index has taken strange and inexplicable turns in recent years, and these have yet to receive sufficient attention.

1970 found unemployment gradually rising through the spring months in a progression of gloomy reports. Then, in June, the trend was reversed and a small drop (one-tenth of 1 percent) occurred. Later, each monthly report before election time trended upward to a rising cacophony of political charges and countercharges.

There can be little question that 1970 was a downer and that unemployment steadily rose during most of the year. But the June aberration has never been adequately explained, and it seems reasonable to believe that the changes in later months appeared more severe because of comparison with the quirky June report.

This year, the same thing may have happened again: rising unemployment in the spring months was followed by a sudden and, this time, dramatic June improvement. Again, the downward trend resumed in July, and the August figure will be anxiously awaited.

The best that the BLS could come up with was a comment by Harold Golstein, Assistant Commissioner for Labor Statistics: "How much total drop in employment statistics is real and how much is a result of statistical factors we can't say at this time."

In June, school lets out. One source indicated that the count was made early in June before all of the new entrants in the market place were out of school. What wasn't discussed was what kind of seasonal adjustment was made in light of this, and whether the seasonal adjustment was further adjusted to coincide with the reality of the time of counting.

With such a complex statistical problem, it may be that no one can ever really say why the June figure appeared aberrant. However, it could be that the weighting system is not adjusted to the reality of the habits of recent classes of college and high school students.

TANFORAN DEVELOPMENT — Architect's rendering shows completed Tanforan Park Shopping Center in San Bruno, including large stores and 100 stores and other services.

$12 Million Tanforan Expansion

The Hapsmith Company, developers of Tanforan Park Shopping Center, have begun extensive grading for a 300,000 square foot addition to the Mall.

Included in the plans is a new 194,500 square foot Emporium (Broadway-Hales) Department store plus thirty additional Mall shops.

Parking is being expanded to 5,000 cars with the construction of a three-story parking structure surrounding the Emporium store and Mall buildings.

The Emporium joins Sears and J. C. Penney's as the anchor stores for the million square foot development.

Cost of the expansion project is $12 million, bringing the total value of the shopping complex to $30 million. The first phase of the Mall opened last March with Sears and thirty-five stores.

Tanforan Park is located in San Bruno just 10 minutes from San Francisco. The property is immediately adjacent to the new Interstate 380 Freeway with off-ramps dropping into the shopping center.

UNITED AIR LINES employes' children were invited to tour the maintenance base this month. The program was designed to show the youngsters what their parent did for the airline and why their job was important. A full days of talks by pilots and stewardesses and movies about airplanes was held. Above Capt. H. A. New Vocational Classes Set at Capuchino High Career education should be an integral part of the high school curriculum, and the process by which students decide what they want to do after graduation should begin early.

Such is the thinking behind a new vocational education program that begins at Capuchino High School when the fall semester starts September 13. It includes a career development center and opportunities for students to explore different occupations.

The Capuchino program is one part of a four-part proposal for career development programs for 1971-72 approved by the Board of Trustees of the San Mateo Union High School District in June.

Estimated cost of the new programs totals $181,320, of which $142,122 will come from Vocational Education Act entitlement funds, and the balance from the district. In addition to the career development center, plans for Capuchino include a work experience program, four workshops, and a redesigned office occupations curriculum.

Two new courses — both pilot programs—have been created as part of the overall career development program: Exploratory Work Experience 1 and 2, and Directory Assistance Operator (conducted in cooperation with Pacific Telephone and Telegraph Company). Both courses were approved only for the 1971-72 and 1972-73 school years.

The written proposal for the work experience education program says the district "recognizes that employment offers a valuable learning experience" for young people, who "need assistance in discovering what is necessary for success as an employe." The purpose of the new district program is to enable the students enrolled in it "to develop a vocational skill and-or make a wise career choice."

The plan approved by the board includes three types of programs: exploratory work experience, which involves unpaid part-time work in a business, industry, or profession for career guidance; general work experience, to help students develop desirable work habits and attitudes while in paid jobs; and vocational work experience, to help students develop and refine occupational competencies necessary for employment in distributive, office, trade, and industrial occupations.

The career development center at Capuchino, to be operated as a pilot program for the next school year, is part of a plan to make career exploration an integral part of the instructional program. The report estimates that between 25 and 30 per cent of the students at Capuchino each year will be enrolled in work experience or volunteer programs in the community, and these programs will be coordinated by personnel from the center. Moreover, the activities of any student engaged in career exploration will occur in, or be coordinated by, the career development center. If successful, the system will be adopted by other schools in the district.

The Directory Assistance Operator course will be started at San Mateo High School in the fall. Pacific Telephone will provide the equipment and will prepare the teacher through an in-service training program. Students who complete the course are practically assured of a job, either as a directory assistance operator or in a related job, according to Troy Nuckols, district director of career development programs.

'Watchdog Group' to Meet in SSF Schools

Citizens for Effective Democracy, a "watchdog group" on schools and government, is meeting tonight at 8 o'clock in the El Rancho School, All-purpose room, South San Francisco.

Cochairman of the group Vern C. Carpenter explained, "We are concerned with helping citizens to become more effective in local government and school affairs and become more effective in helping solve the problems of schools and governments."

The Tuesday meeting is open to the public and has a three item agenda.

Pat Farrington and a team from the national citizen lobby Common Cause will be present at the meeting to discuss voter registration. Common Cause is beginning a drive to register the 18-20 year old group. Carpenter predicts a South San Francisco drive beginning in September.

Also discussed will be the recent staff satisfaction survey in South City. Results showed that most teachers surveyed were "dissatisfied" with the district and considered many situations "potential problems." The three main areas of faculty dissatisfaction were the relations with the teachers, superintendent and the Board of Trustees, the teacher involvement in decision making, and the support for the schools by the superintendent, board and the community.

12 Hurt in Crash

A dozen persons, 11 of them teen-agers, were injured last night when two vehicles collided at Skyline Boulevard and Westmoor Avenue in Daly City.

Highway Patrolman L. R. Osborn said all of the victims were in a vehicle driven by Cecilia A. Smith, 27, of 1048 Riverton Drive, San Carlos, which overturned after being struck by a car driven by Richard L. Major, 30, of San Francisco, at 11:20 p.m.

According to witnesses, the Smith vehicle entered the intersection on Westmoor against the red traffic signal, Osborn said.

Treated at Mary's Help Hospital for bruises, cuts and abrasions were the San Carlos woman and her passengers, Daniel Perry, 16; Janis Driskuss, 16; Norma Mendieta, 16; Dean DeJesus, 16; Paul Gullermo, 15; Dana Bartholomew, 16; Danny Bartholomew, 16; Lloyd Goldberg, 16; Rene Castillo, 14; Oscar Alvarenga, 15, and Julie Diaz, 16, all of San Francisco.

'Prince' Shows Talent

By ROBERT BURMISTER

The new musical "The Unenchanted Prince," presented by the Millbrae Players, shows a great deal of talent on the part of its writers Jeff Colton and Michael Kohl.

Little Theatre groups tend to do original works too rarely, whereas it should be as much a part of their function as building new actors. The music by Jeff Colton is excellent, and Michael Kohl's script is fast paced and good.

Kohl's dialogue for the women is sometimes a little self-conscious and uneasy, but the men's dialogue is fine, and entirely natural.

The two writers collaborated on the song lyrics which are well matched to the music and to the spirit of each character singing them. Not only are the solo songs most engaging, but the ensemble writing is very expert.

The play's title is unfortunate because it does not exhibit the imagination shown elsewhere in the script. The work is a musical version of the Cinderella story with some comic alterations.

The production comes to life well under John Rechtfertig's directing. The costumes are good and the set is warm. The major problem encountered with the set is that as the scenes change from a royal palace to a small living room to a grand ballroom and then back to the royal palace, there is no change whatsoever in the set.

For clarity's sake this should be corrected. Simple devices such as a chandelier to identify the ballroom or a large coat of arms to designate the palace would probably be enough to achieve this and need not cost much.

Geoffrey Cohen is very good as Maximillian, the sorcerer. He gets the evening started on the right foot. Stuart McIntyre acts the role of the King very well. Scenes between these two men are among the show's best.

Cinder Ella, primarily a singing role, is taken by Brenda Thompson. She has a fine vocal talent and handles the role well. Barbara Rechtfertig plays a comic fairy godmother; she succeeds as part scatter-brain, part busy-body.

Her only weakness is in not relating too clearly to the rest of the characters and thus standing out as something stylistically a little different from the rest of the production.

Kathleen Mcntyre as the widow, Diabolica, exhibits wonderful control over her facial expressions. She and director Rechtfertig should work on toning down her excessive body movement which distracts from and undermines her characterization.

Her daughters are played by Kandra Kolvin and Pamela Colton, both of whom are good singers and whose ensemble work blends outstandingly well.

Rechtfertig himself and young Jeffrey Pels play an amusing team of Laurel and Hardy-style horses. Regrettably, Bob Rotta as the Unenchanted Prince is indeed unenchanting.

Special mention must be given to the pianist, Robert Gonnella, who at just fourteen years of age is a first rate musical artist.

Airport Cab Stand Sought

Another in a long list of attempts to get taxi service to the Peninsula from the San Francisco International Airport was made at last night's South San Francisco Council meeting.

Councilman Warren Steinkamp made a motion, which was adopted unanimously, to seek through the airport commission a taxicab stand at the airport strictly for use by Peninsula cabs.

"The operation of cabs at the airport is not beneficial to citizens of this area," said Steinkamp. "I would like to see a stand where cabs with franchises in the North County cities can give service to residents of these cities."

The complaint has been repeatedly made that San Francisco cab drivers refuse to drive fares the short hauls to nearby cities because they don't make the money they would on the long haul to San Francisco. They also would lose their place in the lineup for more fares.

Councilmen agreed that the resolution would be sent to other North County cities for their action on the request.

Suspect Held in 2 Holdups

A San Francisco man was arrested Monday and charged with armed robbery in the holdups earlier this month of finance companies in South San Francisco and Redwood City.

Booked at county jail was Jimmie Lee Spikes, 25, a charter company employe.

Spikes was arrested outside his home by South San Francisco detectives Jack Rhodes and Ron Tetrocchi, who had gone to the house after tracing the license number of a car seen leaving the Beneficial Finance Company following a $400 holdup August 11.

Redwood City Detective Earl Hahn reported that Spikes matched the description of a robber who held up the GAC Finance Company at 727 Middlefield Road August 2, taking $773.

Workshop Set for Divorced

A two-day workshop for divorced persons has been scheduled for Saturday and Sunday, August 21 and 22, at a home in Redwood City under direction of the Transition Institute of Berkeley.

This will be the fourth such workshop on the Peninsula and is to help divorced people make an easier transition to single life.

The seminar approach to this adjustment has been developed by the institute. The two-day course will be followed by an additional evening.

There is a fee. Further information may be obtained by calling or writing the institute at Box 1041, Berkeley, 94701, or through the San Mateo County Mental Health Service office in San Mateo.

2 Arrested on Robbery Charges

Two Woodside brothers were arrested in South San Francisco Saturday as suspects in a strong-arm robbery in Redwood City in which the victim, a young Redwood City woman, suffered multiple injures.

Booked at county jail was Thomas E. Veirs, 20, a truck driver of 635 Star Hill Road. Taken to Hillcrest Juvenile Hall was Alan E. Viers, 17, a laborer, of the same address.

The victim, Cathy Sue Daniel, 24, told Redwood City Police Officer Donald Kerr that she was walking through the parking lot of the Safeway store on Brewster Avenue at 3:55 p.m. when she was accosted by Alan Viers. He grabbed her purse, she said, which was slung over a shoulder, and pulled her to the ground.

As she fell, a six-pack of soda pop she was carrying broke and inflicted multiple cuts. She tried to hold onto the purse and was dragged several feet before she released it.

Witnesses said the youth ran across the street where the brother was waiting in a car, with the engine running. As the car sped off, another woman had to jump out of the way.

Mrs. Daniel was taken to Sequoia Hospital for treatment of cuts on her left arm, right palm, left leg and left ribcage.

A description of the car and suspects was broadcast and the brothers were arrested on Bayshore Freeway in South San Francisco at 4:13 p.m.

The victim's purse, which she said contained no money, was found on the freeway in Belmont and returned to her.

S.S.F. Honors Three Heroes

South San Francisco honored its heroes last night.

Resolutions were adopted by councilmen commending Gerald Segalas Jr., Mrs. Elda Jekot and Mrs. Norma Boike for their actions in saving the lives of Barry Green and Troy Lind.

Barry and Troy are the four-year-olds who were found trapped in an abandoned refrigerator last week. Segalas administered mouth-to-mouth resuscitation to Barry.

"We are proud to have such citizens in South San Francisco," said Mayor Bill Borba in making presentations to the trio.

Pacifican Admits Guilt

James W. Keola, 67-year-old Pacifica man whose car was involved in a fatal accident last October 3, pleaded guilty to a charge of vehicular manslaughter Monday in Superior Court.

Judge W. Howard Hartley scheduled sentencing for August 24 at 7 a.m.

Keola was arrested after his car crashed into two parked cars and a cement wall on Lewis Lane in Pacifica, causing the death of a one-month-old girl who was a passenger in the Keola vehicle. Killed in the crash was Natalia Goumeni, who was riding in the car with her father, Donald Goumeni.

Meet Off

The coaltion supporting the senior citizen low-income housing project for Daly City had its second meeting last Thursday.

Mrs. Virgel Davis, president, Daly City Senior Citizens Club, chaired the meeting of seventeen persons representing nine organizations.

The committee felt more time was needed to give citizens of Daly City more information about this project.

On Thursday, August 19, 7:30 p.m., there will be another meeting of the coalition at the War Memorial Community Center. The public is invited.

THE MARQUEE

Philip Weil of Hillsborough rates the die-hard and music patron of the year awards. He'll again sponsor the San Mateo Winter Music Festival despite last year's disappointing turnout and apathy over stunning performances by two of the nation's finest musicians.

The public didn't seem to realize what a coup it was to have the New York City Opera Company's leading baritone Richard Fredricks and mezzo-soprano Mary Cross Lueders and Raymond Gniewek, concertmaster of the Metropolitan Opera Company, in its midst. They stayed away in droves from the three concerts at St. Bertholomew's Church. Hardest hit was Weil's pride. The fact that he personally lost $20,000 didn't seem to bother him.

"Don't call me a philanthropist. It's just that I refuse to quit on the down side. My great love is music and many of the big stars in that field are personal friends. I just want to share that beauty with the community in which my family and I live," the successful magazine publisher explained.

And if the festival isn't a success this year, he'll still give it another try. Although local and San Francisco music critics gave the event rave reviews, so few people attended, Weil was embarrassed in front of the artists and considered it a big put-down.

The dates this year are December 9, 10 and 11 at San Mateo High School auditorium which holds more people than the church did. He hopes to interest a local charity group in co-sponsoring, not financially but as a community liaison, with all profits to aid its cause. That's a very magnanimous offer.

He's engaged composer-conductor Johnny Green to conduct members of the San Francisco Symphony Orchestra in classical and pops programs with Richard Fredricks and Raymond Gniewek again as soloists and the Roger Wagner Chorale.

Weil's own musical background includes the Eastman School of Music and playing trumpet with the Woody Herman band. His wife Bea sang with the Robert Shaw Chorale and daughters Laura (16) Debbie (13) and Melody Ann (9) are proficient at piano, clarinet and ballet, respectively. Son Philip, age four, hasn't found his musical metier yet.

The couple met when he was playing with the Phoenix Symphony and she was singing in the Phoenix Opera Company.

As choir director in West, Conn., recording church music in Latin, Weil was sent to Rome in 1964 when the litany changed to fight the battle that would retain Latin in church music. He received permission from the Pope to keep one Sunday mass in Latin in the United States to maintain the quality of existing music (the vowels and consonants don't fit in English until new music could be written.

Whatever the outcome of this year's festival, he's secured committments from Metropolitan Opera diva Beverly Sills to perform here next year. This is an incredibly prestigious event for San Mateo, believe me. He also promises tenor Franco Corelli and a week of opera workshops.

Admission Deadline Set at Colleges

The final date for acceptance of applications for admission to Skyline and Canada Colleges has been set. It will be Friday, August 20.

James C. Wyatt, Skyline dean of students, announced that San Mateo County high school graduates and residents who wish to enroll at Skyline College for the Fall 1971 term must complete the applications form by that date.

Skyline College will begin its Fall 1971 term on Monday, September 13. However, new students to the day college must have completed the forms, taken the tests, sent in the transcripts, and had a meeting with the college counselor prior to the opening day of college classes.

The college's day and evening class schedules now are available along with the '71-'72 Skyline College catalogue.

Revised deadline at Canada for receipt of transcripts from all student applicants is Friday, August 27, one week following the deadline for return of the application forms.

It was emphasized that neither deadline applies to persons who will be attending evening classes only. They register during the first class meetings.

Fall semester instruction at Canada also begins the week of September 13.

Youth Urged To Register

If you are 18 years old, you are now old enough to vote.

But you must first register. To vote in the Nov. 2, 1971 district election you must register by Sept. 9.

To vote in the Nov. election, you must be 18 years old by that date; a citizen of the United States for 90 days; a resident of the State and County for 90 days, and of the precinct for 54 days.

At present, un-married minors living away from home must register at their parents address, which is their legal address.

If registered voters have moved, changed their name, or wish to change their party affiliation, they should re-register by Sept. 9.

County Deputy Registrars will be located at the Sierra Bowl and at the following shopping centers on Saturday, Aug. 21: Alec's Serramonte and Westlake.

On Sunday, Aug. 22, registrars will be stationed at Daly City Churches.

Among those cooperating are Broadmoor Presbyterian, Grace Presbyterian, Hope Lutheran, Saint Andrew's, St. Luke C.M.E., United Methodist and Holy Angels, Colma.

Permanent registrars are located at the Daly City City Clerk's office, City Hall and the Information and Referral Center, 6636 Mission Street.

This voter registration drive is being conducted by Action Awareness with the cooperation of the Northern San Mateo County League of Women's Voters and the Referral Center.

Dope Charge for Passenger

A young Portland, Ore., man tripped a metal detection device while preparing to board an Air West plane at San Francisco International Airport early Sunday and ended up in San Mateo County jail on a variety of narcotics charges.

Hubert G. Lee, 23, consented to a search of his person and luggage by U.S. marshals after the alarm was triggered about 1 a.m., possibly by key rings he was carrying.

No weapons were found, but plastic bags containing what appeared to be drugs, marijuana and heroin were discovered in his luggage, and he had $2,166 cash in his possession, according to the marshals. Lee was turned over to Sheriff's Deputy Gene R. Masini, who booked him at the county jail.
